Veto Threat Enlivens Wage-Hour Debate

HOUSE WORKS ON CHANGES FOR THIRD DAY

Recurring Reports Say Senate Will Pigeon-Hole All Amendments to Bill.

PRESIDENT TAKES STAND

White House Letters Strike at Barden Proposals to Exempt Farm Work.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — A presidential veto of legislation revising the wage-hour law was forecast in congressional circles today if the Barden amendments to exempt certain farm processing plants are included.

Legislators based their prediction on Mr. Roosevelt's recent letter saying that it would be "a great mistake" to adopt the Barden proposals.

The president, who returned yesterday from Warm Springs, Ga., called congressional leaders to the White House for a report on the general legislative situation.

Heading the senate calendar was the administration bill to confirm a presidential order "freezing" American assets of Danish and Norwegian citizens and requiring licenses for transactions in them.

Opposes Added Power.

Senator Danaher (R-Conn), leading the opposition, contended that the measure would extend Mr. Roosevelt's peacetime powers "far beyond any wartime powers ever granted to any president."

The house, meanwhile, devoted a third day to scores of wage-hour amendments in the face of recurring reports that the senate probably would pigeonhole all proposed revisions.

The Barden proposals, center of the hottest battle, would exempt from the maximum 42-hour-week and 30-cents-an-hour minimum nearly a score of operations applied to farm products but not performed on the farm.

Man, 79, Asks For Jail Sentence And Judge Grants It

A 79-year-old man who pleaded guilty to an indictment for larceny was sent to the county jail today for 30 days at his own request because he wanted to continue medical treatments by jail physician.

Protesting when Judge C. H. Huston suspended a 90-day workhouse sentence and ordered him back to Pennsylvania, Edward Corson, a transient, was sent back to jail and told to leave the state when his 30-day sentence is up. Corson will continue his treatments.

"I'm glad we have a jail doctor you like; we used to hear some complaints about them," Judge Huston commented.

Corson admitted the theft of two watches, two rings, and a pair of men's trousers from the home of C. H. DeLancy in Plymouth where he had been boarding.

DeLancy had the aged man arrested when he saw him on a Bucyrus street with the pants over his arm and recognized them as his own.

Judge Huston sentenced Carl Glenn, 45, Mansfield, to one to three years in the Ohio penitentiary when he pleaded guilty to an indictment for neglect. Glenn's daughter is in the Richland county children's home and his three sons are in the Boys' Industrial school at Lancaster.

BRICKER NAMED

Governor to Keynote Indiana Republican Convention.

COLUMBUS—(INS)— Gov. John W. Bricker today confirmed that he has agreed to be the keynote speaker at the Indiana Republican state convention in Indianapolis on May 24, but insisted his acceptance was of no political significance.

Mention of the Ohio governor as a dark horse G.O.P presidential possibility was revived on receipt of word that the Indiana Republicans had cast him in the important convention role.

Fund Drive Workers Go After Goal

500 Start Out Today On $57,700 Task; Predict Early 'Victory.'

Cheered by ideal weather and predicting they will go "over the top" in their drive, 500 Community Fund workers launched their annual campaign today for $57,500 for nine character building and welfare agencies in Mansfield.

"The campaign is off to a good start and everything looks encouraging right from the beginning," Chairman Clyde K. Smaltz said.

First reports of the results of the six-day drive will be reported at a meeting Tuesday noon. Daily reports on the progress of the campaign will be turned in at noon meetings until after the drive closes next Saturday night.

The army of workers is in charge of 12 "majors" who will direct the campaign among various groups in the city, including industries, schools, business and retail establishments, and professional people.

They Head Divisions

The "majors" and the divisions they will head are: W. L. Miller, schools; H. W. Arlin, industries; George W. Stephens, special gifts; George Smith, financial group; Atty. Harold Burns, officials; O. C. McCormick, construction group; Atty. James Hoffman, food group; John Routzon and Woodrow Mehl, auto division; C. N. Shultz, professional group; Bart Haley, clothing group, and Robert Remy, public service group.

Posters, handbills, and 5,000 pledge cards made the city campaign-conscious before the drive opened and paved the way for the army of workers that spread over the city today.

Service agencies affiliated with the Community Fund include the Boy and Girl Scouts, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., Friendly House, Salvation Army, Visiting Nurses association, Mansfield General hospital, and the Milk fund. They share in the fund.

WARMEST YET!

'Heat Wave' Settles Over City, Mercury Goes Up to 72.

The Mansfield area experienced a minor heat wave today.

The thermometer rose to 72 degrees above zero — the warmest day this year, according to Otto Sprunger, Mansfield weather observer.

The temperature was five degrees above yesterday's high of 67 as thousands went outdoors to enjoy the first balmy weather of spring.

In Cleveland, the mercury, jumping 16 degrees in four hours, reached 75 at noon today—a degree above the previous 1940 official peak on March 29.

As 'Dawn Patrol' Fliers Landed At Airport

The top photograph shows planes of a Toledo "dawn patrol" which brought 18 businessmen to Mansfield yesterday morning for a visit with Superintendent Arthur L. Glattke of the Ohio State reformatory. The pilots and passengers, former associates of Glattke, were taken on a tour of the institution. In the lower picture, Glattke greets H. C. Williams, a boyhood chum, as he landed at the airport.

Toledo, Marion Pilots Pay Visit to Mansfield Port

Seven Plane Loads of Businessmen Make Early Morning Call Here; Visit Reformatory, Then Fly Home.

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

Mansfield was host to two groups of dawn patrol fliers yesterday. One included 18 Toledo businessmen who landed on Municipal airport shortly after 8 a. m., the other was a group of pilots from Marion who stopped off shortly after noon while making a short swing through central Ohio.

Led by H. C. Williams in a blue low-winged monoplane, the Toledo delegation dropped out of the skies to be greeted by Arthur L. Glattke, superintendent of the Ohio State reformatory.

The seven pilots and their passengers were boyhood friends of Glattke when he lived in Toledo. Williams had arranged the flight here to make a tour of the reformatory.

Ben Owens, chief clerk at the reformatory, and Glattke took them to the reformatory in their automobiles after the seven ships landed. They took off for Toledo after spending four hours as Glattke's guests.

The surprise visits by the Toledo and Marion fliers started off a week of activity for plans enthusiasts here.

And speaking of flight training—the Mansfield students who will

WATER SERVICE TO BE SHUT OFF

Two Areas in Downtown To Be Affected Tomorrow

Water will be shut off in the near downtown section tomorrow for about four hours, O. C. Kalbfleisch, superintendent of the city water department, announced today, while new valves are being installed.

The affected area will be from Walnut west to Bowman street and from Park avenue north to Sixth street.

Kalbfleisch said two valves would be installed, each requiring water to be off about two hours. Thus the section valve in the affected area south of Fourth street will be changed first, and service restored. Then the valve in the section north of Fourth street will be changed.

VICTIM BURIED

Classmates Are Pallbearers For Slain Schoolgirl.

ABINGTON, Pa. —(INS)— While authorities attempted to analyze the warped mental make-up of her confessed slayer, funeral services were held today for Edith Snyder, 16-year-old high school junior killed by a single bullet last Thursday.

Six boys from Miss Snyder's class acted as pallbearers. More than 1,000 persons filed by the body of Edith, clad in white lace, as it lay in a flower-filled funeral parlor at Jenkintown last night.

Meanwhile, the commonwealth was "shaping up" its case against 16-year-old Robert Heineman, son of a Temple university physical education instructor. Heineman, lodged in jail at nearby Norristown, assertedly confessed shooting his classmate and former sweetheart from the porch of her Abington home.

HERBERT GAINS

COLUMBUS—(INS)—The condition of Attorney General Thomas J. Herbert, who is in an Akron hospital with a severe cold and a slight streptococcus infection, was reported improved today by his aides.

JAIL 3RD MAN IN MOLESTINGS

Police Arrest Clevelander After 3 Girls Identify Him in 'Line Up.'

Accused by three small girls who picked him out of a police line up, a 41-year-old Cleveland man was held in jail today for allegedly attempting to lure three children into his automobile yesterday.

He was the third man to be jailed here in recent months in connection with child molesting cases.

The man, who said he was a painter, was arrested shortly after noon yesterday by Patrolmen Howard Schuck and Russell Miles at North Main and Fifth streets, a few minutes after he allegedly tried to lure two girls into his car on Wayne street. Sisters, one was 11 and the other nine.

Police said that only a short time before he had tried to coax a 13-year-old girl into his car on Park avenue west, while her mother watched her from her home while she went to a mail box to mail a letter.

The mother gave police a description of the automobile and part of the license number which led to the arrest.

Taken to police headquarters the suspect was identified by all three children. The 13-year-old girl's mother identified the car as the machine she saw from the window.

The Wayne street girls ran home and officers were called after the man stopped his car beside them and asked them if they wanted to go for a ride, police said.

Detective Lee J. Remy, who questioned the man for several hours last night said he admitted arrest in Cleveland on two occasions on similar charges. The man's wife who came to Mansfield last night, the officer said, told him the same story.

Remy said charges would be filed against him tomorrow after a complete check of his record is obtained from Cuyahoga county authorities.

8 Die In Ohio Traffic, Auto Crashes Into Mansfield Home

Week-end traffic mishaps claimed the lives of at least eight persons in Ohio as the first balmy weather of spring brought thousands of motorists out on the highways.

The Mansfield area however, escaped traffic fatalities. Only two accidents were reported and two persons were injured, neither seriously.

Frank Ruckman, 23, and his brother, Clarence, 19, both of Shelby, sustained face lacerations early Sunday, when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into a house at 118 Orange street. The house, owned by Charles Amato, was damaged by the crash.

The elder Ruckman told police he lost control of his automobile in trying to avoid a collision with another car which he claimed went through the intersection of Wayne and Orange street without stopping.

In another accident yesterday a truck owned by the Akron-Chicago transportation company of Akron, broke loose while parked on North Diamond street and crashed into a utility pole at North Dia-

CALLS PARLEY ON COUNTY AND CITY RELIEF

State Director to Reveal New Financing Program During Conference Tomorrow.

MORE FUNDS RECEIVED

State Sends $2,600 to Pay on April Bills; Payment 10 Per Cent Short.

Richland county, Mansfield, and Shelby officials were requested today by William H. Hartsough, state relief consultant, to confer with him in Columbus Tuesday afternoon on the financing of a relief program for 1940.

Hartsough will discuss the new program with County Commissioners C. L. Mitchell, Guy Stewart, and Ray Hout; Auditor Norman L. Wolfe, and County Engineer Howard Sword, representing the county; W. C. Statler, city engineer, and Mayor William R. Morris of Shelby.

Mayor Can't Go.

Mayor William J. Locke and City Auditor Paul Kelley were also asked to attend, but they said other engagements would make it impossible for them to go to Columbus. The meeting was set for 2 p. m.

In his letters to the officials, Hartsough gave them no idea of what he plans to offer them. He said the discussion will be devoted to relief problems in the county and Mansfield and Shelby.

Similar meetings will be held this week with officials of other counties and cities in the state where relief problems have been hardest to solve, Hartsough said.

Meanwhile, the county today had received $2,600 from the state to help pay its bills for April. That amount represents about 40 per cent of the total relief expense in the county, Wolfe said.

Under the program which was placed in operation last July the city and county have never received more than 41 per cent of their monthly relief funds from the state although the program calls for a 50-50 matching basis.

PERILS 2 GIRLS

Gunman Steals Purse of One In North Side Hold-up.

A youthful gunman last night held up and robbed two Mansfield girls on North Main street, and fled with a purse containing $1 in change.

Miss Dorothy Gonshirski, 144 Lily street, told police the bandit accosted her and her sister, Anna, near the intersection to Harker street while they were on their way home.

She said the youth, whom she believed to be colored, came from the rear and pressed a gun against her back and demanded her purse. She said when she started to turn around the gunman warned that he would shoot.

Her sister, she told the officers, screamed and ran down Harker street, as the youth grabbed the pocketbook and fled.

Battle to Win Central Norway Control Looms

British Forces Dig In For Defense Of Two Valleys; Germans Reported To Have Reached Railway Linking Two Enemy Forces.

BULLETIN

STOCKHOLM—(UP)—A Norwegian military attache said today that the German column striking for Hjerkinn on the Dombaas-Stoeren railroad had been halted by strong resistance along the ridge between the Oester and Dovre valleys.

(By Associated Press)

STOCKHOLM—The allies today put up what may prove to be the first really organized resistance to Germany's effort to rush troops across Norway to bolster Nazi-held Trondheim.

They were holding strategically-placed, strongly-defended machine-gun nests and light artilley positions guarding narrow mountain roads northeast of Dombaas in the Gudbranrsdalen (valley) and between Roeros and Storen in the Glomma river valley.

German troops, driving over snowy mountain roads, were reported to have reached the vital railway linking British bases at Dombaas and Storen.

They were said to have engaged an allied force in the first phase of a battle expected to decide control of southern Norway.

The fighting was reported sharp and some observers expressed belief a situation had been reached in which allied troops may be able to take advantage of strategic defense positions.

The Germans, however, already have proved their ability to advance swiftly over difficult mountain trails to outflank forces barring their way.

But this has been largely dependent on protection from German warplanes scouring a path clear for the motorized units and, from the allied viewpoint, much depends on their air defenses.

Reports that the British had concentrated troops at Hjerkinn, above the Dombaas-Storen railway, and that fighting already was in progress there were interpreted here as evidence that allied resistance is developing.

The British war office announced in London last night that more troops had been landed at Aandalsnes despite German air attacks, and it was reported that these had been rushed by rail to Dombaas, 65 miles southeast of the debarkation point.

The Norwegian radio broadcast an announcement that a German column had struck at the railway at Hjerkinn, 20 miles north of Dombaas and about 80 miles south of Storen.

Success of the German attempt to cut the rail line at this point would isolate the British force at Storen, which is exposed to attack by German troops concentrated at Trondheim 35 miles north.

Both the British and Germans were reported rushing reinforcements to the Dombaas front, and Swedish sources expressed belief that both sides were preparing to throw every ounce of strength into a decisive battle.

WARLIKE: Italy Unleashes New Verbal Attack On Allies

(INS Staff Correspondent)

ROME — New warlike, pro-German proclamations by authoritative Italian spokesmen indicated today that possible Italian entrance into the European conflict is looming closer than ever before.

Latest utterance on the tense subject came from Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of Foreign Minister Count Ciano's newspaper Il Telegrafo. In a broadcast to the Italian armed forces on Sunday, he said:

" It is not possible that a country like Italy can stay for long out of a conflict such as the present one. This was brought out with the great authority recently in extremely important statements by speakers in the chamber of corporations.

"We have only one thing to do. Be prepared for the order which will come. These words 'be prepared' involved Italy's fate and the fate of us all.

"The armed forces of the western powers are in danger of being smashed to smithereens. All our good wishes accompany the Ger-

ANSWER: Norse Claim Proof Of Nazi Plans For Invasion

(By United Press)

STOCKHOLM, Sweden—C. J. Hambro, president of the Norwegian parliament, says that Norway now has irrefutable proof that Germany long planned its invasion and that, while Germany was making its plans, the German minister was expressing to the Norwegian government his sympathy for Norway and his eagerness to help her remain neutral.

In a bitter refutation of charges that the Allies, with Norwegian connivance, had themselves planned an invasion, Hambro said that Norway has received disastrous proof that Britain was totally unprepared even to meet a German invasion.

Hambro charged that a big German whaler which entered Narvik harbor the night before the invasion, crowded with hidden German troops and war materials, flew the American flag and had American nationality marks painted on it.

He disclosed that Norway intended to issue a diplomatic white book to show that Germany planned its invasion a month in advance.

Joachim Von Ribbentrop, German foreign minister, in his charge Saturday of Allied-Norwegian plotting, had proved the opposite of what he intended, Hambro said.

He accused the German consul at Narvik, Dr. M. A. Nolda, a World war submarine commander,

Government Girls Not Lonely

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Life should be thrilling," said Dr. Hornell Hart of Duke university, lecturing to "lonely Washington women, frustrated in their normal biological destiny."

The group to which he carried these sad tidings was made up of typical government women workers, getting good salaries, living in charming apartments most of them, and dressing well. And was the fat in the fire? Rather!

One of them snapped out: "You never see government girls wringing their hands for want of matrimony.

"Marriage or no marriage," said Mrs. Lucile Foster McMillan, Civil Service commissioner, "women here have every opportunity to develop their creative selves." Dr. Hart admitted opportunities for culture in Washington, D. ,C. But he still continued to can culture as an unsatisfying substitute for "normal biological destiny."

A good part of his audience, remembering how many proposals they had turned down because they liked being independent and their substantial pay envelopes, not to mention living in Washington with its opportunities for social and cultural contacts, squirmed slightly. He continued that there were in the National Capital "rich resources in music, entertainment, social life, a high educational level, opportunity to be part of a great creative enterprise—but that Washington inflicts unhappiness because it draws together great numbers of lonely women, for whom no mates are available.

Again he took to the wailing wall. Washington's unmarried women, he said, are making a brave struggle. They could get married in cities like Detroit, for instance, where men are in the majority. Evidently, Dr. Hart must imagine that nothing short of excess patriotism brings girls to Washington to work in government departments.

For more than thirty years this column has been stressing propinquity as an aid to marriage. The doctor believes in it, too, and said: "One of the biggest helps to marriage is propinquity. Women in their twenties should make marriage a major objective. They should devote vacations and week-ends largely to that aim."

"But where there is a scarcity of men, and women are hard-pressed for mates, something satisfying and constructive may be found in work. Almost everything has interest," he concluded hopefully.

But soon the cat was out of the bag. It seems that Dr. Hart drew his ideas of all this spinsterly anguish, loneliness, neglect, melancholia among Uncle Sam's nieces, from a questionnaire he distributed to a female audience two weeks ago. On that occasion, the audience was "21 and over." In fact, the major part of the audience on that occasion had been "21 and over" for a good many years, when they filled in the said questions.

Marriage Meddlers

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

By Adele Garrison

The men who had been detailed to guard the attic were too well trained to voice surprise, but they were astonished when they saw the aperture in the seemingly impenetrable chimney breast.

"We have found the manner in which those men got into the attic," my father said in matter-of-fact tones. "This stairway leads to a tunnel which has its final exit a long way from the house."

One of the men, a little quicker of perception than his fellows, uttered an explosive "Gee!" then rushed on with hasty but jubilant speech.

"I'm sure glad to hear that," he said. "Before this we've been wondering what weak spot there might be in our line, or whether one of us might have gone to sleep on the job. But this clears us."

"You didn't need clearing with me," my father said, not emotionally, but with the air of a man stating a self-evident fact. "But at this point we must consider what to do with this knowledge now that we have it."

He turned to Dicky with a gesture toward the aperture.

"Can you close that door again?" he asked.

"I hope so," Dicky said with a grin, and put one hand far inside the aperture.

"Stop!" my father said peremptorily. "Take your hand out of there!"

Dicky obeyed, but with a rueful, questioning look at the Chief.

"Wasn't that a hidden spring of some sort which released that door?" my father asked.

"Yes, it was," Dicky admitted.

"Then," my father said severely, "don't you realize that if the spring were touched again, the door might come back with sufficient force to break your arm?"

Dicky looked a bit sheepish.

"I guess you're right, sir," he said. "Anyway, our luck is with us. The spot I last touched which released the spring is on this side of the door, and it's where I can reach it without danger. I'll be most careful."

"See that you are!" my father told him, and then we watched breathlessly while Dicky fumbled along the edge of the door, which finally moved slowly back again into place. He drew his hand back far enough to keep it from being caught, but kept his eyes intently fixed upon the spot his fingers had last pressed. When the door stopped, he took a pencil from his pocket and made a small mark upon the stone chimney breast at the point where the spring had opened the door.

"There!" he said, turning to my father, "we won't have to fumble all over creation next time."

"That's a good idea," my father commended, "but"—his voice was suddenly peremptory—"I want it clearly understood that no one, under any circumstances, save a grave emergency when I cannot be reached, is to touch that spring unless I authorize the action."

"I do not anticipate that any other attempt to get into the attic through his door will be made tonight or even tomorrow," he said. "But as it is of the utmost important to keep our knowledge of this secret door from Leslie's gang, we cannot afford to take the slightest chance. I am, therefore, asking you men to aid me by enacting a little comedy."

The eyes of the guards left the chimney stone and riveted themselves upon my father's face.

"One of you," he said, "must always be on duty before this opening. You may arrange your shifts as you see fit, but one pair of eyes must always be fixed on the door. If you hear any noise behind it or see it move ever so slightly, the one on duty is to call out loudly to the other, 'That's a mis-deal, I tell you,' and the other will answer in angry protest. In that manner any intruders on the stairway will not only be deterred from coming in by the knowledge that there are several of you here, but they will also be lulled into the belief that we have not discovered the secret of the chimney.

"The Authority on Authorities"

BEATING A NO TRUMP

MANY a No Trump game contract gets made because of an unsound lead, when the correct one would have beaten it. Knowledge of principles of effective defense can enable the opener to pick a card generally which will accomplish two purposes—start the side on a promising compaign and enable your partner to have a pretty good idea of the makeup of your own hand.

Suppose North bid 1-Heart, South 2-No Trumps and North 3-No Trumps, and you as West held one of the following hands:

1. ♠ Q J 9 5
♥ K 6 3
♦ Q J 9 6
♣ 8 2

2. ♠ A 9 5 4
♥ K 6 3
♦ J 9 6 5
♣ 8 2

3. ♠ 9 5 3
♥ K J 6 5
♦ K 10 7
♣ Q 10 8

4. ♠ 8 4 2

5. ♠ 6 5 2

♦ K 7
♣ 6 3

6. ♠ 6 5 2
♥ K Q J 10 8
♦ K 7
♣ 6 3 2

With No. 1, your best lead is the spade Q, in preference to the diamond Q. The declarer or his partner might hold a good minor suit and refrain from showing it, but would not be likely to keep a worthwhile major concealed.

With No. 2, the diamond 5 is a better lead than the spade 4, since the side ace may later serve as an entry to help bring in a set-up diamond, whereas the diamond J could be of hardly any value in helping bring in a set-up spade trick.

From No. 3, a lead of the dummy's heart suit is inconceivable, hence you must lead a short suit. For two reasons the spade 9 is preferable to either minor suit. First because it does not jeopardize a guarded honor, second, because being a major it is more likely to be your partner's than the declarer's suit.

Hand No. 4 is so weak you probably never would regain the lead to cash any diamonds you might establish; hence you had better try to hit your partner's suit with the spade 8.

A heart lead from No. 5 probably would help declarer build up dummy's tricks, so the spade 6 is preferred. With No. 6, the heart K obviously is the lead, as it will set up tricks for yourself, with a possible side re-entry.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, April 30

An eventful day, with affairs moving at high tempo, is predicted from the predominant planetary configurations. The movement will descend with sudden and possibly revolutionary force, causing change of plans and objectives if not environment, and attended by unforeseen hazards. However, the general trend is toward a rampant spirit of initiative and definite purpose, with the forces and faculties under excellent stimuli for achievement and success. A parallel situation of excitement and commotion is found in private afairs.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of an extremely lively and enterprising year, with much of the surprising and unpredictable maturing in connection with new plans and great ambitions. These, while spurred by high pressure, energies and initiative, carry unforeseen perils, but managed with forethought, bold initiative and acumen, should bring splendid results. In social, domestic and romantic affairs similar high tension and satisfaction may be anticipated. It is promising for well-directed and resolute action.

A child born on this day may be aggressive, ambitious, dynamic and indomitable, although probably restive and erratic. Its splendid energies and faculties assure it marked success and much personal prestige and happiness.

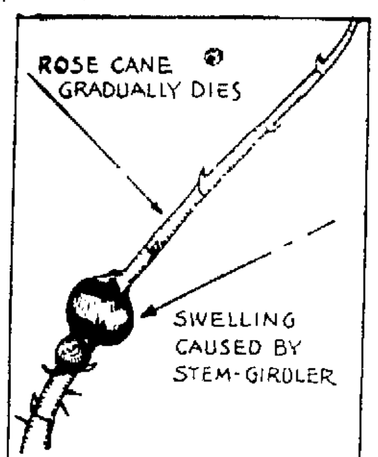
Garden Graph

By DEAN HALLIDAY



Life Insurance for Rosa Rugosa.

Rugosa roses, especially older bushes, are frequently attacked by the rose stem-girdler. In some cases the results ruin the entire planting. The pest responsible for girdling these roses is a metallic colored borer which is noticeable during June and July.

As shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph, the stem-girdler causes swellings on the stems, these swellings being somewhat elongated and marked with longitudinal lines.

The foliage of rose canes infected by the stem-girdler turns yellow and slowly withers, after which the cane gradually dies. Any infected canes should be cut out immediately upon being discovered, and burned. A control measure is to spray the roses in June and July with arsenate of lead.

Crusade to Help War Refugees to Wind Up Tomorrow

With collection boxes in Mansfield and Richland county schools already well filled, school children in the city and county made their last contributions today in the "Children's Crusade for Children."

A nation-wide program, the Crusade was set up for the benefit of children of European war refugees.

With an appeal addressed to the 12,000 school children in Richland county, the Crusade has won the endorsement of school officials who have directed teachers and educators the nation over to drive home that a democratic form of government is the greatest safeguard to happiness.

Nationally, the Crusade is conducted by Dorothy Canfield Fisher, American writer, and William Allen White, veteran newspaper man of Emporia, Kan. It is not being conducted as a drive for funds but as a gift offering of pennies.

THEATERS

Ann Sheridan Sings.

With the intensity of plot and characterization typical of all Louis Bromfield stories, he shows the lives of a New York family in his late film story "It All Came True" at the Madison theater. His characters, content to live in the reveries of their past, are suddenly thrown into a turmoil when a gangster used the boarding house in which they live as a hideout. Ann Sheridan, who has the leading role, sings such old favorites as "Mr. Dooley," "Oh, You Beautiful Doll" and "Pretty Baby" with the same quality that she sings the new rhuma "Gaucho Serenade" and "Angel in Disguise."

* * *

Joan Fontaine In "Rebecca."

In "Rebecca" which is showing at the Ohio theater the director wanted to show secret and powerful drama in the very atmosphere. The title character, Rebecca, who exerts a dread influence on Laurence Olivier and Joan Fontaine, never appears on the screen. Yet her presence, like the whisper of doom, hovers always over Manderley. Grim, ancient and foreboding, the vast outlines of Manderley, haunted Tudor castle of the de Winters, gives an eerie background to the picture story.

* * *

Comedy Drama.

Ginger Rogers and David Niven have the leading roles in "Bachelor Mother," which opens a three day run at the Majestic theater Tuesday. Miss Rogers plays the role of a department store sales girl during which she displays her flair for comedy. A hilarious mix-up over a baby forms the axis about which the story revolves. "Intermezzo," a love story, introducing Ingride Bergman, with Leslie Howard, is the co-feature.

* * *

Radio Stars Screened.

"Village Barn Dance," which is featured at the Park theater expertly blends a sure-fire cast of radio and screen personalities. Richard Cromwell plays the leading role in the story which is punctuated by clever acts from such personalities as Vera Vague, Lulubelle and Scotty, and two popular radio bands, "Texas Wanderers" and "Kidoodlers." The co-feature is "The Human Monster" with Bela Lugosi.

* * *

Gene Autry In Western.

UNQUESTIONABLE FACTS!

In an independent survey last fall, 1475 users of extra-priced gasolines voted 9 to 1 that

...proves Nu-Blue Sunoco

UNSURPASSED in mileage

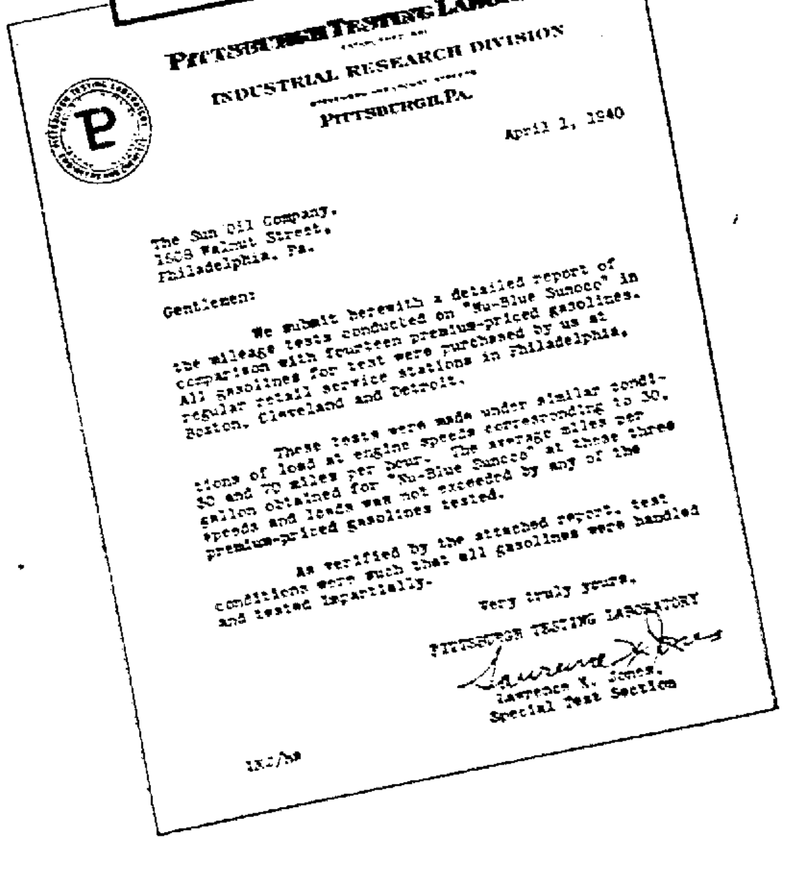
in scientific tests against 14 leading extra priced gasolines



PITTSBURGH TESTING LABORATORY
INDUSTRIAL RESEARCH DIVISION
PITTSBURGH, PA.

April 1, 1940

The Sun Oil Company,
1608 Walnut Street,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Gentlemen:

We submit herewith a detailed report of the mileage tests conducted on "Nu-Blue Sunoco" in comparison with fourteen premium-priced gasolines. All gasolines for test were purchased by us at regular retail service stations in Philadelphia, Boston, Cleveland and Detroit.

These tests were made under similar conditions of load at engine speeds corresponding to 30, 50 and 70 miles per hour. The average miles per gallon obtained for "Nu-Blue Sunoco" at these three speeds and loads was not exceeded by any of the premium-priced gasolines tested.

As verified by the attached report, test conditions were such that all gasolines were handled and tested impartially.

Very truly yours,
PITTSBURGH TESTING LABORATORY
Lawrence X. Jones
Lawrence X. Jones,
Special Test Section

[illegible]

These tests, completed March 27, 1940, by the Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory, were made to cover different driving speeds: low, medium and high. Regardless of speed, Nu-Blue Sunoco was unsurpassed in miles per gallon; and since it sells at regular gas price, Nu-Blue Sunoco gave more miles per dollar.

To make a fair test, don't dilute Nu-Blue Sunoco with other gasoline. Instead—for best results—let your tank run practically empty. Then put in Nu-Blue Sunoco. Compare it against any gasoline at any price, and particularly against extra priced fuels. . . . We'll rest our case on your findings.

Police Hunt Two Men In Slaying of Kentucky Jailers

TURNKEY SHOT INVESTIGATING FIRST KILLING

One Slain as He and Wife Seek Refuge From Assailant In Home of Relatives.

(By United Press)

JACKSON, Ky.—Police Chief A. S. Sizemore sought two men today in connection with the killing of William Combs, 40, county jailer, and Bent Sizemore, 25, jail turnkey, in another "blood" Breathitt county feud.

Combs was shot and killed when he was locked out of a relative's home where he and his wife sought refuge from three assailants at the city outskirts. His wife escaped.

Sizemore, a relative of the police chief, went to the scene with another officer when he learned of the shooting. One of the gunmen dropped him with a single bullet before he was able to draw his gun.

Rudell Combs, 25, distant relative of the jailer was arrested and held on an open charge at Winchester, Ky., jail to prevent further violence, Chief Sizemore said.

He said he believed that he knew who the two men sought were, and that "a couple of other men were involved" in the shootings.

Sizemore said that the shootings were the result of a long-standing dispute between Combs and one of the men sought. Although "bloody" Breathitt has been notorious for its feuds for almost 15 years, the present disputes were attributed to political differences that began with the contest between U. S. Sen. Alben W. Barkley and former Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler for the U. S. senate. Two men had been killed in gun duels earlier this year.

Ile de France Due To Sail Tonight With War Cargo

NEW YORK —(INS)— Departure of the French luxury liner Ile De France for war duty was predicted by maritime circles to take place on the high tide shortly after midnight tonight.

The 43,450-ton vessel, loaded with the biggest war cargo to leave the United States, requires only the filling of her fuel-oil tanks before making a dash to some unknown destination from whence it is believed her load of 12,500 tons of copper will be transshipped to either France or England.

It was said the Ile De France may go to Halifax where her copper cargo will be placed aboard other vessels for the trans-Atlantic voyage.

Then, it is believed, the luxury liner will speed to an Australian port to join the Cunarders Queen Mary and Mauretania as a troop transport.

OLD COURTHOUSE HIT BY BLAZE

$5,000 Damage Done To Century-Old Lebanon Building.

LEBANAN — (INS) — Warren county's century-old courthouse was damaged to the extent of $5,000 today by a fire which Sheriff William Hufford said started from a paint burner being used by workmen repairing the eaves.

Volunteer firemen under Chief Clarence V. Dunham fought the blaze for two hours and succeeded in confining it to the attic. Most of the loss was due to water which was two inches deep in the common pleas courtroom.

County employes saved all court records.

DEWEY RESTING

Put To Bed To Recover From "Digestive Disorder."

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo.—(UP)—Thomas E. Dewey's campaign tour stalled temporarily here today as the New York district attorney and Republican presidential candidate recuperated from a "digestive disorder."

Physicians put him to bed in a hotel with orders to remain at least until Wednesday. They said he had "a slight fever" but emphasize that his illness was not serious.

Labor Board Opens Offices To Handle Strike Claims.

WASHINGTON—(UP)—The National Labor Relations board opened offices today in Youngstown, Canton, Massillon and Niles, O., to consider claims for back pay and reinstatement of 9,000 strikes in the 1937 "little steel" strike.

The claims will be made against the Republic Steel corporation. The labor board's case against the company recently was upheld by the supreme court.

Up and Down THE STREET

With the vacation season at hand, the Richland County Auto club already has begun to prepare a library of maps and travel literature at its office on North Mulberry street for the benefit of motorists planning trips this summer. Maps and literature from numerous vacation resorts and cities in the United States and Canada have been ordered, and will be displayed at the office in four large racks which arrived last week, according to Jack R. Berger, assistant secretary.

Fritz Howell, Associated Press sports writer, who "covered" the relays here Saturday tells this about a dusky fight promoter in Akron who booked what was described as a "whale" of a boxing show. On the night of the fight it rained and as a result, gate receipts weren't up to expectations. The promoter, Howell says, eyed the empty seats and stepped into the ring before the show was to go on. He had a telegram blank in his hand. Sorrowfully, he read the "wire" informing the audience that the Marquis of Queensbury required a stipulated sum for the use of his rules that night, and wound up by stating "we will now pass the hat." The Marquis of Queensbury who drafted the rules used in boxing 80 years ago died in 1900.

Fred Ruffer of Garden Acres has an atlas of Mansfield that would be of interest to every citizen. It was printed in Philadelphia in 1882 by E. Robinson and has the maps of every ward. Sixth street then was John and Short streets. Park avenue was Market street, Diamond street was Water street and South Diamond extension was Washington road. Houses are marked brick or wood as are horse stables. The Atlas was compiled under the supervision of E. Robinson and R. H. Pidgeon, civil engineers. The book was given to Ruffer by Mrs. Adam Hans of 73 Altamont avenue.

Mansfield fishermen who came back empty handed from fishing expeditions yesterday will wonder about a story that is being told today. Five Mansfielders were at Channel Grove on Lake Erie yesterday and they had real luck, according to the story. They began fishing at 11 a. m. and when they had finished at 2 p. m. there were 104 fish in their possession. There was more than a score of Mansfielders at lake fishing spots yesterday and most of them just wasted their bait.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO MINE DEAD

Governor Delivers Eulogy as 4,000 Attend Memorial For Blast Victims.

(By International News Service)

NEFFS—The 72 victims of the March 16 Willow Grove mine blast stood canonized as martyrs today by Governor Bricker, who delivered the principal address at memorial services attended by 4,000 persons.

The chief executive was introduced by John Owens, president of District six of the United Mine Workers of America, as a "statesman who has the interests of the miner at heart."

Bricker chose for his text at the services: "Greater love than this has no man, who lays down his life for his friend." He expressed the hope that the children of the victims would contribute as much to the public welfare as their fathers did.

Other speakers included Congressman Earl Lewis of St. Clairsville, Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the UMW, and officials of the Hanna Coal company, operators of the mine.

FINDS OHIO'S WHEAT OUTLOOK GOOD DESPITE SEVERE WINTER

(By Associated Press)

WOOSTER—An inspection trip throughout Ohio convinced C. A. Lamb, Ohio agricultural experiment station agronomist, that the state will have a normal wheat crop this year despite the severe winter.

"Rumors of severe injury to winter wheat have been much exaggerated." Lamb reported today. "Damage is restricted to very exposed positions and to injury from standing water in low spots."

Although the crop entered the winter with much less growth than normal, Lamb said "growing weather continued almost until Christmas and most fields got a fair start."

"Average temperatures were unusually low during the early part of the year, but there were no exceptionally low points," he continued.

"Furthermore, snow was abundant, and an almost constant cover was maintained. For these reasons, cold injury was limited entirely to very exposed knolls where the snow blew off, mostly in the hilly sections of southeastern Ohio although it was not generally serious even there."

Lamb noted that wheat fields following corn or soybeans, where the previous crop used soil moisture late in the fall, were distinctly poorer than fields following oats or sod.

Questions Legality of Davey's Candidacy

RIVAL IN PARTY ASKS LIMBACH TO INVESTIGATE

Doubts If Ex-Governor Voted For Majority of Party Candidates in '38.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Arthur Limbach, Democratic state chairman, was asked today to inquire whether former Gov. Martin L. Davey, seeking a third term nomination, was a qualified Democratic candidate.

The request was contained in a letter from John Taylor of Salem, leader of anti-Davey Democratic forces during Davey's last term. Taylor principally opposed appropriation bills which he termed "exorbitant."

Taylor wrote that as a candidate for lieutenant governor he made the requested oath that he voted for a majority of Democratic candidates at the last general election, and asserted:

"It is a matter of general knowledge and belief that former Governor Davey (whose political machine is quietly opposing me on the basis of 'disloyalty') did not support Democratic nominees x x x. In fact, it is general knowledge that he went out of his way to defeat the Democratic state nominees.

"Therefore, I believe that you as state chairman should inquire of the secretary of state whether or not he (Davey) is legally eligible to have his name appear on the ballot as a Democrat."

Ohio has a Dewey-for-president club in the wake a weekend of political activity on many fronts.

More events are scheduled for this week including appearances in Ohio by Paul V. McNutt, Democratic presidential aspirant, and Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge (R-Mass).

Democrats will hold meetings at Marietta Tuesday and at Lima Saturday where McNutt will speak. The league of Young Republican clubs will convene at Columbus Saturday to hear Lodge.

Thomas Dewey of New York, candidate for Republican presidential nomination, did not know the new Ohio club was to be formed in his behalf, said James R. Geren, its president.

Geren, former Columbus postmaster, said "it is in response to what we believe to be the predominant sentiment of the rank and file of Republican voters in Ohio."

With Republican organization support solidly lined up for Sen. Robert A. Taft, Geren said no effort is likely to be made to obtain "write-in" votes for Dewey in the May 14 Primary.

The Voice of BROADWAY

—By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Speaking for Myself.

I am always amazed when glamor girls turn out to be good cooks, but some of them really are fast hands with an egg beater and perform on a stove as well as they do on a stage. Lynne Fontanne is supposed to be a terrific gal with a salad bowl, and Greta Keller is as skilled with the skillet as she is with her songs. Sometimes the profile boys can rustle up a swift table d'hote, too.

The best spaghetti I ever tasted was concocted with great nonchalance by Enzo Fiermonte, who was a glamor boy around these parts for a brief spell.

"Narvik" sounds to me like an added starter in the Kentucky Derby . . . There's something awfully sadistic about a subway guard at 5:19 p. m. . . . I never could understand the implied aristocracy of the sun tan. I think a sun tan looks great on Johnny Weissmuller, terrible on a lady . . . I don't know Dorothy Parker, but I miss her bittersweet sonnets in the magazines.

* * *

I think ballet dancers are the hardest working and least appreciated of all classes of professional entertainers. Ask people to name three ballerinas and watch 'em stop after they "Zorina" . . .

I think Fannie Brice is one of the funniest women in the world—maybe the funniest—but I abhor her Baby Snooks character

Lindy's always looks more like Lindy's when Damon Runyon is sitting around listening quietly to the picturesque gab of the horse-players.

I've never been on a toboggan ride, never expect to be. It makes me dizzy just watching them in the newsreels . . Prettiest show-girl line-up in town at the moment is the row at the Diamond Horseshow—with emphasis on Mildred Riley and Isabel Gallagher, who look more like sisters than any sisters you ever knew. . . . I think pink champagne is overrated. It looks gay, like circus lemonade, but the yellow kind tastes better.

* * *

I think the most fascinating cigaret smokers to watch are Russians—they unconsciously punctuate their conversation with tricks in smoke. . . . The decorations at El Morocco look as if they were whipped up by a pastry chef. . . . There are so many tropical dancing places in Manhattan these evenings. I wish somebody would open an Eskimo night spot.

It won't really be spring until Harry Richman strolls down Madison avenue in that straw skimmer. Maybe it won't really be spring even then. Brrr!

Every now and then, because of a fad or a headline, the public has to learn a new word — and does, even to the kids in the street. Current word, sadly enough is "blitzkrieg" . . . Nothing delights me less than lady tap dancers—even the good ones. . . .

Nicest prizefighter I ever met was Lou Ambers; prettiest, Fred Apostoli.

* * *

Never saw such goings on as those at the Beachcomber. Mr. Ching, the Number One Boy, has recently taken to stretching out on the floor, smoking a big cigar and conversing with the customers about the war, the third term, and the fourth race at Jamaica. He usually relaxes on his tummy in the entrance to the bar, and at about 3 a. m. has a meal served to him—on the floor . . . I am fascinated by the word "snood" but I think there are too many of them.

I think "Native Son" is a great and powerful novel . . . I like the way Ted Straeter plays Chopin nocturnes on the piano between dance sets at Fefe's Monte Carlo.

* * *

It seems to me some of the best comedians have been most popular when they identified themselves with animals.

Joe Penner with his duck, Bert Wheeler with his "mousey," Jack Benny with a polar bear, Lew Lehr with monkeys, Bing Crosby with horses, and now Jack Haley with a seal.

Sazerac cocktails will probably replace the Zombie as a drink fad when all those New Orleans bars open at the World's Fair. . . . Swellest of the new midnight entertainment is Sylvia Marlow's swing harpsichording at the Rainbow Room. . . . Skie terriers always look like Scotties who've been caught in a revolving door. . . . Jane Pickens has more sense of showmanship than any of the girls who sing solo on a night club parquet. They all just stand behind the microphone and sing—but she lights candles, waves roses, wears crowns, and creates the illusion of a spectacle. And what a wardrobe!

* * *

What's so intriguing about a sarong? I'll take a Schiaparelli any day . . .

Street cleaners are such sad looking fellows. I never saw one smile . . . It's wonderful to watch the crowds at the new Skateland —the do rhumbas and congas on roller skates!

I hear the film version of "My Son, My Son" has a happy ending —makes me mad.

Hollywood Speaks---

* * * * *

There's a sequence here in which Jack Benny waits outside an apartment house in a rainstorm while his retainer, Rochester, pays court to a comely light-colored maid upstairs.

For the first part of the picture that sequence seems symbolic: Benny's out in the rain while Eddie Anderson, the slickest negro comedian in these parts, is tucking the picture under his arm and strutting away with it, or there is no funnier sequence in recent films than this of Rochester's meeting, wooing and teaing with the shapely and talented Theresa Harris. When Benny arrives finally to break it up, he's a "heavy" because nothing he has contributed is a tenth as amusing.

However, a Benny displaying a riper screen assurance comes into his own as the film proceeds. After he has been tricked into a western sojourn by his "enemy" of the orchestra, Phil Harris, to win the favor of pretty Ellen Drew, the Benny stock soars. There's a load of tenderfoot fun, climaxed by one of the most hilarious chases yet filmed to twit the conventional westerns. The ending finds Buck Benny up against a couple of tough hombres he thinks are his stooges, and it's a bang-up finish.

The net results, barring a few lifeless cracks which smack of Benny's air program when it's weary, is a laugh-filled, exuberant piece of entertainment. Oh, yes, the music is nice, too.

"One Million B. C." Screenplay by Mickell Novak, George Baker, Joseph Frickert. Directed by Hal Roach and Hal Roach, jr., Principals: Victor Mature, Carole Landis, Lou Chaney, jr., John Hubbard.

* * *

A long, long time ago the Rock Tribe (we're told here) didn't know the first thing about manners, but the Shell Tribe, down the river a piece, had met Emily Post. The Rockers (Mature Chaney, et al.) tore into their food, first come first served if you were strong enough to beat off the rest of the family, but the Shellers (Landis, Hubbard, etc.) were polite and fed the women, children and old folks first. Rocker Mature gets knocked out in a squabble with Rocker Papa Chaney over a choice cut of Triceratops, and floats unconscious down the river to be discovered by gentle Sheller Landis. There he learns soft words can turn away wrath, which is a nice sermon at a time like this in human affairs; he learns how to laugh, how to hold his little finger well out while he chaws his meat, how to raise parsnips, and how to pitch woo, which he does enthusiastically.

There's scarcely any dialogue that doesn't sound like Ug-Blug-Mugg, but there's nice music and a thunderiferous earthquake and a lot of cute prehistoric monsters (with no pretense at fidelity to pre-history) to make it an engaging novelty for the kiddies and a nice laugh for the grown-ups.

Stover Cuts Mansfield Braves' Squad Down to Limit

Selects Players For First Game Against Lima

Twenty Players to Make Up Team Until May Club Opens Season At Fairground Wednesday.

By CHARLES MARTIN

FACED with the difficult task of having his best players selected for the opening game against the Lima Pandas Wednesday night at the Fairground, Manager Dewey Stover today released the roster of the Mansfield Braves for the 1940 Ohio State league season.

Nine of the 20 picked by Stover are carry overs from the 1939 team, but Stover has 11 youngsters making up the balance of the club whom he expects to make it a real threat.

Stover may carry the 20 until May 22 and then he must drop five more off the roster. Who will make up the 15-man squad after that date remains a mystery for a number of the beginners have impressed Stover.

Veterans returning from the 1939 team are Harry Seigbert, first base; George Laurila Bob Arnold and Lloyd Joyce, pitchers; Frank Ankenbrandt, third base, Howard Beals, second base, and Connie Zerman, outfield.

The Braves will have a tall team this year with 12 of the 20 Stover is retaining at least reach the 6-foot mark. The shortest men on the squad are Ankenbrandt, Zerman, Beals and Tim Mangan. All are 5-foot, nine inches. Mangan is a catcher and utility infielder.

Stover sent his team through a stiff workout early today and will return to the Fairground tonight for a workout under the lights. It will be the first time this year the lights have been turned on.

In a intra-squad game yesterday, the No. 1 team or the one Stover believes will be in the line-up opening night, registered a 7 to 3 victory over the second team.

Dick Morris of Toledo, an outfielder, is the first Brave to hit a home run. He turned the trick in the third inning of the game yesterday.

The Braves' officials will stage a fan night at the Armory at 8 p. m. Tuesday. The showing of the American league picture "hitting All Bases" will be a feature of the meeting. Cy Young, former major league pitcher, who will throw the first ball Wednesday, is expected to be here for the session.

Larry Scott, Braves' ground keeper, announced today that the playing field is in better shape now than it was at the end of the 1939 season.

A parade will precede Wednesday night's game. It will start at the American Legion hall. The Legion Drum corps and the Grotto Patrol will lead the parade.

The Mansfield club officials were working hard today to have a record crowd on tap for the opener. If Mansfield has the largest attendance per capita on opening night the league will award it a trophy.

North, Tech Battle For State Crown

Columbus and Cleveland Schools Expected to Stage Close Fight.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS—(AP)— Another nip-and-tuck battle for the state high school track and field championship loomed today for the May 24-25 classic, with Cleveland East Tech and Columbus North in the leading roles just as they were a year ago.

* * *

In the 1939 competition East Tech nosed out North by the slimmest margin in the meet's history, 36 1-6 to 35. Saturday East Tech continued its winning ways by amassing 78 points to cop the 14th annual Mansfield Relays, 48 points ahead of second place Cleveland East, winner of the 1939 meet.

* * *

Columbus North counted 33 1-3 points to annex the Ohio Wesleyan team relays title for the second straight year, 10 1-3 ahead of second place Springfield, and 11 1-3 in front of always strong Toledo Scott.

East Tech grabbed seven first places and tied for another at Mansfield. Five seconds, three thirds and a fourth place helped swell their total.

Wrist watches went to the individual and relay team winners of all Mansfield events, and Chet Thomas, East Tech's state dash champion, had four at the finish. He copped the 100 and 220-yard dashes and the broad jump, and anchored the 880-yard relay team to a new meet record.

Harold Lane of East Tech grabbed both the high and low barrier races at Mansfield, while Bob Shaw, Fremont's all-Ohio grid and basketball star, rounded out the dual winners with victory in the discus and shot put, the latter with a 54-foot heave which eclipsed both the meet and state records.

At Delaware, where all events were on a team basis, Columbus North finished on top by winning the 440 and 880-yard relays along with two seconds, three thirds, two fourth places and a tie for fifth.

* * *

Xenia's O. S. & S. O. home won the Class B crown at Delaware, ending Upper Arlington's four-year reign. The defending champs scored only six points.

* * *

The class C team championship was won by Mansfield with 1083x1200.

The other record 1434x1500—was rung up when Medina captured the league champions' match, besting the previous high of 1122.

The Summit county league's 10-man team tumbled its old record of 2858x2900 when it fired 2873 to win the league All-Stars match.

A new record of 58x100 for the standing position was made by Forrest Lawrence of Carrollton in a telegraphic match with Wyoming. The old record of 96 was cracked when the Ohioans fired [illegible] to win the match. Wyoming shot 1918.

George Kuntz holds the singles crown by virtue of his brilliant 674 turned in yesterday. The Optimist club was the defending champion, but it failed to come near the new titleholder's mark in its match Saturday. Approximately 40 teams participated in the classic.

Dodgers Face Real Test On Western Tour

By JUDSON BAILEY

A BASEBALL whirlwind that was stirred up in Brooklyn and has swept ruthlessly through the east will strike toward the western clubs of the National league today and whether it is just a zephyr or an honest-to-goodness cyclone should be known in short order.

* * *

The Dodgers have won eight straight games for the best winning streak at the start of the season any major league club has had since 1918, when the New York Giants won their first nine.

* * *

The Dodgers may be pennant [illegible] and [illegible] are if they can [illegible] streak even against [illegible].

They subdued the New York Giants 5-3 yesterday before a hooting, cheering crowd of 51,659 in the Polo grounds with a two-run homer by Dolph Camilli in the ninth inning turning the trick. Whit Wyatt was given spectacular support afield.

Young Gene Thompson chucked a five-hitter at the Pittsburgh Pirates and Ernie Lombardi hit a homer and three singles for a perfect day at bat as the Cincinnati Reds triumphed 8-2.

The St. Louis Cardinals finally showed some of the power which made them contenders a year ago and trimmed the Chicago Cubs 7-5. The Cards had to use two pitchers with Clyde Shoun getting credit for the victory.

The Boston Bees broke into the win column at last with a 3-2 [illegible] Phillies on a smart seven-hit pitching performance by Lefty Joe Sullivan.

* * *

The pace-making Cleveland Indians of the American league withstood a challenge by the Detroit Tigers and won 11-9 in the tenth inning of Hal Trosky's two-run circuit clout.

* * *

In two other overtime games in the American league Sunday the Boston Red Sox were forced 12 innings to nose out the Philadelphia Athletics 5-4 after taking a three-run lead in the first frame, and the Washington Senators handed the New York Yankees their third straight defeat 3-2 when Gee Walker singled George Case home in the tenth.

The St. Louis Browns piled up 17 hits, including a three-run homer by Walt Judnich in beating the Chicago White Sox, 11-8.

Feller Faces Tigers

Bob to Turn and Atone For Being Shelled Last Week.

DETROIT—(AP)—Bob Feller goes tiger hunting today in an effort to atone for being knocked out of the box by Detroit last week and to keep the rampaging Cleveland Indians on top of the American League heap.

A barrage of home runs treated the Sunday crowd here as the Tribe defeated the Tigers 11 to 9 to continue in first place.

The speed-balling Feller figures to keep them there for he beat Detroit six times in a row last year.

* * *

Everything happens to Henry Pippen. He pitched a good game against Johnny Allen's victorious season debut. And now he gets the call against the fireballer again.

* * *

In the home run show the Indians rolled along comfortably to an 8-to-3 lead in eight innings. Roy Weatherly hit a homer off Schoolboy Rowe in the first inning.

Barney McCosky, first Tiger to face Al Milnar, hit another. Jeff Heath connected with one for the Indians in the seventh.

The Tigers scored six runs to tie the game in the ninth, in the course of which McCosky planted his second smash in the outfield stands.

* * *

Hal Trosky broke up the game in the tenth with a drive high into the upper deck, scoring with Ben Chapman who had singled.

* * *

Golfers Click Off Impressive Scores

By GEORGE SATTLER

WITH the offical golf season scarcely two days old, Mansfield golfers have already started clicking off some impressive scores.

* * *

Lowest score of the weekend was posted by Lawrence Deley, who paced off the inside nine at Possum Run for a nifty 33, three strokes under par. Deley then chalked up a 40 for the second nine, to total a 73 for the eighteen.

* * *

John Kleshinski, who also tried the Possum Run links yesterday, wound up with a 37 and a 40 to total a neat 77.

Out at Coolridge Pete Zimmerman took scoring honors by shooting a 39 and a 35. Following close behind were Phil Schwaner and his cousin, Ferd Schwaner. Phil shot a 40 and a 37 and Ferd netted a 37 and a 39.

* * *

Although no top scores were posted at the Westbrook Country club links, the course was reported in tip top shape with a large crowd playing over the weekend. Many of the members tramped the links for the first time this season.

* * *

Irish McGee said today that the Possum Run course was busy all day yesterday and estimated that over 300 golfers played the course. Art Fovargue also reported an unusual number played the Coolridge nine yesterday.

Millers, Blues Battle For 1st

Association Contest Looks Like Re-run of '39 Season.

(By Associated Press)

The American Association race is only 10 days old but already it is beginning to look like a re-run of the 1939 battle for first place between Minneapolis and Kansas City.

* * *

The Blues won a year ago and are favored to repeat but the Millers have shown sufficient power and pitching in winning seven of their first nine games.

* * *

Minneapolis moved into a game and a half lead yesterday with a double victory over last-place Columbus, 16 to 5 and 2 to 1.

Kansas City, although losing a full game to the Millers, stayed in second place by splitting a double header with third-place Indianapolis, winning the first 8-3 and losing the second 11-7.

Louisville defeated Milwaukee, 3 to 2, in their first tussle but the Brewers evened the count in the second engagement, 5 to 3.

Toledo and St. Paul likewise broke even, St. Paul taking the opener 14-6 and losing the afterpiece 3-2.

FIND OLD THEORY ISN'T WORKING THIS SEASON

DETROIT —(AP)— The theory that late comers enjoy an advantage in American Bowling Congress tournaments isn't working out too well in the present revival of the pin classic.

Keglers schedueld late in the tournament were supposed to profit from the "softening" of new alleys but only five of the 169 teams which bowled during the week-end topped the 2800 mark.

After Title Again

Lombardi's on Trail of National Loop Batting Championship.

CINCINNATI—(AP) — Ernie Lombardi, the Reds' catcher who was jibed the winter-long about an unfortunate blackout he suffered at home plate during the final world series game last season, was on the trail today of the National league batting championship as the Reds went after three straight over Pittsburgh.

Holder of the title in 1938, Lombardi made fans take notice with a long-range circuit clout over the center field fence and hits which brought in three more runs for Cincinnati's 8-2 victory over the Pirates yesterday.

* * *

The big backstop gave fair warning of his intentions when tendered a 1940 contract but until he cut loose against Pittsburgh his batting this season had not been especially impressive.

* * *

The powerful round trip drive, which left no doubt as to the seriousness of his threat, inspired the Reds to feel out their batting strength and when the smoke cleared in the seventh Cincinnati had touched Danny Mac Fayden and two other Pirate hurlers, Rip Sewell and Oadis Swigart, for 15 hits.

Junior Thompson, who dropped a game to the Cubs last Friday in Chicago, allowed the Pirates only five hits. He walked Virgil Davis and Pep Young and saw them cross the plate to give Pittsburgh a 2-1 lead but the invaders' advantage was shortlived.

Paul Derringer, after his second victory of the season, was called by the Reds for mound duty today while Max Butcher, a fugitive from the Phillies was to pitch for Pittsburgh.

Pitcher Hurls No-Hitter In First Contest

Dale McKinley Does a 'Feller' as Team Wins 18-1.

Dale McKinley made Mansfield softball history yesterday afternoon by pitching a no-hit game for the Alta Lumber company soft ball team and defeating the Service Cabs 18 to 1.

* * *

Besides not allowing a hit, McKinley struck out 11 batters and smacked out a home run with the bases loaded in the third inning. He also netted three singles, two of them when the bases were loaded.

* * *

McKinley pitched a no-hit game for the Musille Cigars in the opening games of the 1938 season against the East Side Nite club nine.

Approximately 150 people witnessed Alta's star hurler's performance. The game was called at the end of the seventh inning.

President Decides Not To Fire Ump

OKLAHOMA CITY—(AP)— Umpire Bill Wilson is "tickled to death "because Alvin Gardner, Texas league president, decided not to censure him fror pulling a knife in a dispute at Fort Worth Thursday.

"I've thrown that knife away," he said. "I lost my head. I've apologized to all concerned and I hope it will soon be forgotten."

Milton Price, league secretary, said that both Wilson and the San Antonio players who rushed him to dispute a decision "erred but the players made the first mistake."

CHAPTER XXIX

Their conversation was silly, of course, but it did have the effect of immediately breaking the first tension and Elaine smiled happily as Clara slipped into a chair beside her. It was good to be friends with Clara again; she had missed her greatly during the past few weeks. And she had missed Eric, too. Eric! She'd have to see him. She'd have to tell him how sorry she was for acting so idiotic. But —would he listen to her? Would he be interested in knowing a girl who condemned him without a hearing?

As though reading her mind, Melvyn leaned over the table and grinned consolingly. "Eric is supposed to meet us here," he told her quietly. "As you can see, everything has been well planned."

"We're the best little fixer-uppers in the world," Betty sang smugly. "Now, for a reward, I think it is only right that you buy us a scotch and soda."

"Betty Gordon, if you start drinking again I'll walk out on you," Clara declared, rising to the bait, as Betty had intended her to. She turned appealingly to Melvyn: "Please, will you tell her that it will be dangerous for her to get drunk so soon after her thick head has been fractured?"

* * *

It was like old times, and Elaine relaxed in her chair to enjoy the quibbling. She smiled as Melvyn, to settle the argument, dropped a nickel into the electric player and invited Betty to dance.

Clara sighed as they moved across the floor to dance. She laid a hand on Elaine's arm. "Gosh, this is swell, Elaine."

Yes, it was swell, and if Eric were here now everything would be perfect. Eric! Would he come? But he had to come. He had to give her a chance to tell him how sorry she was. She looked at her watch nervously as the minutes passed swiftly by. Speedily, inexorably, the hands moved around the dial of the diamond baquette watch, and Elaine developed an ache in her neck from turning around to see who was coming in whenever the door of the restaurant opened.

There was a puzzled expression on Betty's face as she sank exhausted into the chair. She and Melvyn had danced at least a dozen times since he put the first nickel into the player.

"Late, as usual!" she stormed, banging her fist on the table. She eyed Melvin. "Why is it that you men are always late?"

He grinned coolly. "I thought it was just the other way around. But don't worry. He'll show up."

This last was addressed to Elaine and she wondered if her nervousness was so obvious as all that. She supposed it was; she had never been good at hiding her feelings. She wondered, too, if Eric would really come. But of course he would. She was acting like a schoolgirl again. Naturally Eric would come.

* * *

But he didn't. It wasn't until the hands on her watch pointed to ten o'clock that all four of them realized that Eric would not come. Elaine, as she walked slowly out of the restaurant, felt more depressed and beaten than ever. Eric was through with her; he had decided that he wanted nothing more to do with her. He had felt, and perhaps rightly, that if a girl couldn't trust a man and have complete faith in him she wasn't worth marrying.

Elaine did not know, nor did Clara, that Eric had been compelled to work overtime in the store. Nor did either of them know that he had received his first promotion; that he was now a floorman in the sporting goods department and that his salary had been increased from sixteen to twenty dollars a week.

* * *

"It's a ring even a golddigger should want, Mr. O'Malley! Such a beautiful diamond I have never seen in all my life. And for you I make a special price."

Pat carefully placed the scintillating diamond ring in its royal blue plush-lined box and rested his elbow heavily upon the counter. His blue eyes were shrewd and hard as he surveyed the eager jeweler. Special price! Shure, an' when it was a special price people talked about that was the time to be holdin' onto your wallet.

"'Tis ginerous of you, Mr. Motkin," he said courteously. "But 'tis confusin', too. Why should you be wantin' to give me a special price?"

"Why?" Mr. Motkin's delicately horrified tone of voice hinted that this question was very definitely not in order and that it pained him very deeply in the region about his heart. He sagged wearily against the wall-case and wagged his head mournfully.

"That you should ask such a question, even think it, Mr. O'Malley! Oy, I'm sick. You are my friend, ain't you? You are one of my steadiest customers, ain't you? So why shouldn't I give you a special price, ha? Answer me, why shouldn't I give you a special price?"

Jack mulled over this for a moment and then nodded his head, conceding the soundness and legitimacy of this logic. Settling his other elbow comfortably upon the oak counter, he again eyed the ring. That it was lovely there could be no doubt. That it was fit to be worn upon Jane's third finger there could be no doubt either, for this ring was of that type which would have pleased an angel, and surely Jane wouldn't spurn a piece of jewelry which even an angel would be pleased to accept.

His carefully composed face offered not the slightest hint of what he was thinking, for, shrewd trader and bargainer that he was, Jack had learned that to express satisfaction over an article before you purchased it was akin to committing financial suicide. He removed his cap and scratched his red head as though puzzled as to just what he should do.

"'Tis a nice ring I suppose," he admitted cautiously, placing the cap back on his head. "But the price. . . ."

"So cheap it's a crime," Mr. Motkin informed him persuasively. "Five hundred dollars, and I shouldn't live to see my children tonight if that ain't the rock-bottom price."

Jack buttoned his coat with great deliberation and started for the door. "It is my condolences I am offerin' you, Mr. Motkin. Shure an' it's too bad that you must die so young. Ah, well, man proposes and God disposes. It's fate. I'll be biddin' you goodbye."

"Mr. O'Malley!" Mr. Motkin dashed from behind the counter and seized Jack's arm as he opened the door. "You shouldn't act like that. It's such a beautiful ring. Your fiancee will be proud to wear it."

Jack brushed the protesting hand away, but hesitated in the doorway. "I have no fiancee as yet, Mr. Motkin. I am planning on asking the hand of the fair colleen tonight an' if she says yes I want to be prepared."

* * *

The fire in Mr. Motkin's eyes indicated his hearty approval. "A man of action!" he exulted, rubbing his hands together. "A man who will not take a lady's no for an answer. Mr. O'Malley, I am proud to know you. To show you how proud I am I will give you the absolutely lowest price. There ain't a single cent of profit in it for me, but—four hundred and seventy-five dollars. Not a penny less. Positively not a penny."

"Three hundred, Mr. Motkins," Jack rumbled relentlessly, maintaining his threatening position by the door. Of course the jeweler would be perfectly justified if he decided to throw him out of the store. But he somehow guessed that this wouldn't prove the case; that the jeweler would offer one last compromise price.

His guess proved a good one. For what seemed a very long time to Jack, Mr. Motkin stood by the wall-case with closed eyes and sober face, pondering this offer. Finally the lids flew up on his eyes and he shrugged his shoulders. "Four hundred and fifty, my last price, Mr. O'Malley. Absolutely my last price."

"Done," Jack agreed hastily. The ring was probably worth around two hundred and seventy-five dollars, but he had to have it. It was for Jane. In the sparkle of the diamond was the bubbling effervescence of her personality, in the solid value of its platinum mounting was embodied her solid worth as a woman, while in the exquisite beauty of the ring as a whole was incorporated her beauty, not of face or figure, but of character and soul.

"I'll be goin' off duty at ten," he announced stepping aside to permit another customer to enter the store. "I'll be pickin' it up then."

"Fine! Fine!" Mr. Motkin exclaimed jovially, moving over to wait on the new customer. "And I want to congratulate you, Mr. O'Malley. You're getting a real buy. But that's my policy," he added for the edification of the new arrival. "All my customers receive value for their money in this store."

"I'm glad to hear that," the customer announced promptly, placing his leather brief case on the counter. "My company is interested only in jewelers who want to pass real value on to their customers. Now I have with me this evening some unusually fine gold-plated crosses and chains which I think. . . ."

Jack stayed to hear no more.

Some day, perhaps—some one—some where—would look upon her and ask, curiously, "Miss Warburton, why did you never marry?" The question would pain her; for a long moment she would sit silently before her inquisitor, remembering the first ecstatic sweetness of her love, recalling to mind how happy she had been, and what greater happiness had been in store for her, and then, when her questioner began to fidget restlessly upon his chair she would turn her head and face him frankly and whisper, "I had a lover, once. We would have been married—only I—I was not worthy of him."

Melvyn Stuart's gay laugh rang out as the dilapidated car eased over the summit of the long hill. "There, I told you Elaine. The tin lizzie is still the best car on the road."

Elaine smiled dutifully, wishing that he would keep still. His gay comments had the effect of completely destroying her chain of thought, and right now what she wanted most in the world to do was to think.

And there were so many things to think about, so many things to clarify. For more than a week now, ever since Eric left for California, she had been putting off that inevitable day when she would have to decide what she was going to do with her life—life without Eric.

Her love affair with him was definitely over, of course. His flight to California had been tantamount to breaking their engagement. His way of telling her he did not think much of a girl who refused to trust the man she professed to love. There was no sense in devoting any more thought to him. But what about her singing and, more important, what about Melvyn?

She glanced at him from the corner of her eye. He was the most important person in her thoughts right now. What to do for or about Melvyn? He loved her. He wanted to marry her. There was no room for doubt concerning that. During the past week she had seen a new Mel Stuart, a man who was sympathetic, tender and understanding, a man who loved her very much and who tried desperately, for the sake of her peace of mind, to hide this from her. Hide it! The corners of her lips quirked into a smile. As though he or any other man could ever hide those telltale signs which are an open book to a woman.

And Melvyn was going to propose this afternoon. How she had come to guess this she did not know. Melvyn had studiously avoided mentioning any subject even remotely related to love, yet somehow, perhaps it was that woman's intuition she had heard so much about, she knew that he was going to propose.

And what should her answer be? Had Eric not left for California her reply would have been obvious. But Eric had gone to California, a fact which made matters more difficult. She didn't love Melvyn, of course, and yet, what was love, and, more important, what right had she to hurt him? She had ruined her own life to a certain extent Eric's. It was time she did something decent, something to counteract all the damage she had done. And who had a better right to kindness than the man who had treated her so kindly during the past frightful week?

"A penny for your thoughts." Melvyn's teasing voice brought her back to earth. "They must have been important. Do you know that you haven't said one word or looked in my direction for the last fifteen minutes?"

Elaine laid an affectionate hand on his. "I'm sorry, Melvyn. I was just doing some thinking."

As though sensing she did not wish to discuss what she had been thinking, he nodded towards a roadside stand a few hundred feet down the road. "Want a hot dog or a soda? You really should eat something, you know. A bird couldn't live on what you ate for lunch."

A sunny smile drove the frown away from Elaine's face and she nodded her head eagerly. Conscious of an empty feeling. "Gracious, I am hungry!"

"Well," he exclaimed in a pleased tone of voice, "this is more like it. Frankly, Elaine, you have me worried. It isn't good for a girl to miss as many meals as you have recently."

Elaine's laugh matched the gayety she suddenly felt inside. "You're telling me? Melvyn, I'm starving!"

* * *

He eased the car to a halt and climbed eagerly to the ground. Watching him stride gayly over towards the roadside stand, Elaine found herself marvelling over the effect her smile and gay words had upon him. If ever there had been doubt in her mind concerning his true feelings for her, his present reaction would have eliminated them. She could feel herself growing tense on the seat. If she refused to marry him he would be hurt, grievously hurt, and she didn't want to hurt people any more. And yet, what if she did marry him? Was it right to consent to marry a man you knew you would never love?

Before she had time to answer this question Melvyn's voice again broke into her thoughts. He came striding over to the car, a cardboard plate in one hand, a bottle of soda in the other.

"Here are two hot dogs," he said, smiling, "and a bottle of soda and a box of ice cream. No one can ever claim I don't treat my women well."

"No one would ever think of saying that," she assured him gratefully. "Gracious, Melvyn, I don't know why you are so nice to me. What have I done to deserve it?"

His reply was long in forthcoming. For a full ten minutes he sat quietly at the wheel, tooling the car carefully along the congested road, and Elaine had consumed the food and drunk the bottle of soda before he decided to answer her. Drawing the car to a halt before a clump of huge maples, he turned to face her, eyes glowing, lips pursed into a serious line.

"You know why I am nice to you, Elaine. You know that I love you, that I would do anything in the world for you."

SO THAT'S AXEL'S GAME, EH? AND WHAT A GAME! HE THINKS HE CAN TAKE OVER THIS WHOLE COUNTRY- MAKE HIMSELF RULER- AND WITH JUST A FEW HUNDRED MEN- WHY, THAT'S CRAZY TALK!

STEELS, MOTORS EDGE FORWARD IN STOCK MART

General Motors, U. S. Steel Among Issues Receiving Moderate Support.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Steels, motors and specialties edged forward in today's stock market, but many leaders failed to get going.

Receiving moderate support were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, American Car & Foundry, Worthington Pump, International Paper, Westinghouse, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania and U. S. Rubber.

Bonds and foreign securities markets were mixed. Commodities did better.

Market analysts noted optimistic reports from automotive centers placing sales of new cars in the second ten days of April 10 per cent above the first part of the month.

Studied was the survey of the magazine "Steel" which found recent withdrawal of price cuts in this industry had enhanced prospects for sustained or slightly higher output.

Find Business Gains But Warn of New Deal Policies

U. S. BUSINESS LEADERS MEET IN WASHINGTON

Draft Industrial Programs to Be Presented to Both Party Conventions.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Spokesmen for the nation's key industries today reported improved business conditions, but tempered their optimism with a renewed warning against the ultimate effect of New Deal economic policies.

Assembled for the annual convention of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, more than 1,000 business representatives set to the task of drafting an industrial program which will be transmitted to the Republican and Democratic convention platform committees.

John W. O'Leary, chairman of the chamber's executive committee, sounded the keynote for the convention by proposing the following economic suggestions:

1. Reduction in government expenditures.
2. Further revision of the federal tax structure to protect business enterprise.
3. A balanced federal budget.
4. Maintenance of a strong national defense.

O'Leary also urged capital and labor to engage in "team-work" in order that productivity, national income and living standards can be advanced.

Reporting on business conditions in the northeastern areas, Walter D. Fuller, president of the Curtiss Publishing company, Philadelphia, told the delegates that Pennsylvania through its job-mobilization plan, has reduced by nearly 50 per cent the number of relief applicants.

"Business in Pennsylvania," Fuller said, "has been better."

"Build America!" was the slogan of the convention, which during the day will hear spokesmen from six geographical divisions answer the question: "How's business?"

Dr. Paul Van Zeeland, former Belgian premier, and Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, will address the delegates tonight.

UPHOLDS STEEL PAY RATE ORDER

Supreme Court Rejects Attack of Companies on Edict of Labor Department.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — The supreme court dismissed today an attack by seven steel companies upon a labor department order fixing the minimum wages they must pay their employes to obtain federal government contracts.

Justice Black delivered the decision which held that no legal rights of the companies "were shown to have been invaded or threatened." Justice McReynolds dissented.

Black said the litigation "makes its fitting to remember that 'the interference of the courts with the performance of the ordinary duties of the executive departments of the government would be productive of nothing but mischief.' "

The labor department order was issued under provisions of the 1936 Walsh-Healy act, which require companies selling the government more than $10,000 worth of supplies to pay their employes the prevailing minimum wage for their "locality."

The steel companies contended the labor department had included 13 states, part of a 14th and the District of Columbia within one "locality."

Today's decision reversed a ruling by the United States court of appeals for the District of Columbia enjoining enforcement of the wage order.

3 Fishermen Try Banned Waters, It Costs Them $18.90

Yesterday's balmy weather and the urge to pull in the "big ones" cost three Mansfield fishermen $6.30 apiece in municipal court today for violating the Ohio fish and game law.

Charles Henerson, 25, of R. D. 3, Mansfield; Joseph F. Menke, 39, of 39 Parker street, and F. A. Arnold, 50, of 196 McPherson street, were given $10 suspended fines by Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch and ordered to pay the costs.

All three pleaded innocent to charges filed by C. I. Kimmel, deputy fish and game protector, who accused them of fishing in the Pleasant Hill dam waters in Worthington township.

INVESTIGATOR'S MEMO CENTER OF NLRB INQUIRY

Author of Note Testifies He Believes Board Should Be Guided by Workers.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — An official memorandum in which a National Labor Relations board investigator asserted that board hearings should be held "as adjuncts to unionization drives in strike preparedness," today held the attention of the house NLRB investigating committee.

Placing the author of the memorandum on the stand—Herber Blankenhorn—the committee heard him defend his statement and assert that he believed the board "should be guided by demands of the workers."

He denied that he had meant that the board should aid strikers or unionization campaigns, but only protect and "insure the right of self-organization."

He said the memorandum was written on June 16, 1936, when the board was being enjoined in court and was considering curtailment of hearings.

Ex-Newspaperman.

Questioned by Committee Counsel Edmund Toland, Blankenhorn said he worked seven years as a newspaper man in New York and five years for the bureau of industrial research there.

Then, he said, he worked abroad for a Washington labor paper, after which he became connected with the old NLRB prior to passage of the Wagner act.

Blankenhorn said he had spent "a lot of time" since joining the board in performing work for the senate civil liberties committee.

In one memorandum to the board, Blankenhorn reported he had urged the senate civil liberties committee to hold hearings in which the board would be allowed to present evidence of "interference with labor rights."

"It ought not to take more than one or two such hearings to make companies hesitant about rushing to courts for injunctions," he wrote.

In a third memorandum was attached a proposed resolution for the CIO to urge additional appropriations for the senate committee.

Blankenhorn wrote that "this resolution has been put in their hands." He denied, however, that he himself had drafted the proposal resolution.

CHAMBERLAIN, OPPOSITION IN PARLEY ON WAR

Consultations Called as Public Criticism Over Campaign In Norway Increases.

(By International News Service)

LONDON—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain conferred with opposition leaders today while a wave of criticism over the British military campaign in Norway surged among politicians in London.

There were reports that members of parliament will demand a secret session of the house of commons to permit open discussion of the Norwegian situation.

In a series of conferences at his 10 Downing street residence, the prime minister talked with Major Clement R. Atlee, Sir Arthur Greenwood and Sir Percy Harris, Laborite leaders, and Lord Crewe, Liberal peer.

Numerous consultations among other leaders took place over the week-end apparently in preparation for a debate on British military strategy.

Chamberlain's visitors were said to have informed him of developments on the Norwegian question in political circles.

Although many parliament members publicly stated they are tired of depending upon terse communiques for their war news, informed quarters said Chamberlain probably would not make a statement in commons tomorrow regarding the campaign.

Owing to the increasing pressure however, the premier was expected to detail British movements in Norway in a talk later in the week.

Rumors regarding British reverses have been contributing to the gathering controversy.

Supporters of Chamberlain rushed to his defense with the explanation that his lips have been sealed for strategic reasons and that, as a result of this, the Allied effort in Norway has tended to slip out of perspective.

But Chamberlain's first full statement will satisfactorily answer his critics these circles maintained, and prove that the Allies' war effort in Norway so far has been the best possible under difficult conditions.

TAKEN TO O. S. R.

Ellwood City Robbers Begin Terms in Reformatory.

Three Ellwood City, Pa., men who admitted they slugged and robbed Philip Schmutzler, restaurant operator, of $1,240 on April 12 were taken to the Mansfield reformatory today to begin sentences imposed Friday by Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston.

Taken to the reformatory by Sheriff E. P. Long were William Justine and Vincent Carbeau, both 28, and Rocco Cusato, 24.

While the court entries on the sentences specify terms of from 10 to 25 years for armed robbery, the trio may be eligible for parole in 22 months.

Since the youths were sent to the reformatory as first offenders, the Ohio Parole commission can exercise its jurisdiction and release them in less than the minimum time specified in armed robbery cases, Prosecutor G. W. Marriott said.

Mrs. Williams Urges Friends To Give "VENDOL" a Trial

Got So Much Relief from Pains in Back, Arms and Legs, Stiff Hands, and Other Troubles Due to Sluggish Kidneys and Constipation, Wants Others to Benefit, She Says.

Mrs. Martha Williams, residing on Route 2, Belleville, O., had this to say to the Vendol Man in Central Drug Store:

"I was badly constipated and my kidneys were sluggish in action, and this condition made me suffer almost daily from such pains across my back that every time I bent over, felt I couldn't straighten up and the pains in my arms and legs were almost unbearable. Many a night my sleep was broken by the aches and pains.

"I was advised to try Vendol and the little Vendol laxative tablets, and I'm glad I took the advice, because this medicine has truly done me a wonderful amount of good.

"In only a few days after starting on Vendol I noticed my bowels moving full and easy, and this relief from constipation with the diuretic action of Vendol on my kidneys, soon gave me astonishing relief from the backache and painful arms, hands and legs, and now I never lose any sleep because of these pains.

MRS. MARTHA WILLIAMS

"Vendol helped me so much that I heartily urge my friends who suffer the same way to give it a trial. I know it will help them."

Reports like the above from well known and reliable people are what make Vendol so popular. If you suffer the same way, why not give this great medicine made from 12 Herbal Extracts rendered mildly Alkaline, a trial. It is like taking several different medicines all wrapped into one, at the cost of only one, and the first bottle usually gives grand relief.

Give Vendol a chance to help you too; it welcomes any test. Come to Central Drug Store, corner Main and Fourth Sts., ask for the special Vendol Representative known as the Vendol Man, and get all the facts without obligation. Most all leading druggists sell it.

ALLIES RALLY, CHECK GERMAN FORCES' GAINS

Berlin Admits Resistance Has Stiffened; Major Battle Drawing Closer.

The official German news agency admitted for the first time that German progress in Norway was meeting increasingly stiff opposition.

It said that the British in Norway, after their "failures" in past weeks "obviously had received orders to strengthen their resistance," but the agency said the firmer British stand "had not halted" Nazi drives.

DNB, amplifying today's high command communique, reported that the Nazis in capturing six additional Norwegian batteries had seized 20,000 artillery shells and a large number of portable wireless sets.

Berlin yesterday claimed officially that in the Stavanger district, which has been the target of repeated British air attacks, the Nazis had taken 241 officers including "numerous English fliers," and 2,921 men. The communique did not say how many of these prisoners were Norwegian.

Stavanger is in southwest Norway and previously had not been represented as a region of large land operations.

Germany still radiated confidence, however, that the Nazis' military and diplomatic blows were undermining allied strength.

On the political battlefront, authorized Nazi sources maintained that Germany was satisfied that faith in British and French assurances had been removed from the minds of neutral nations.

This, they held, was the result of Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop's declaration Saturday that Germany marched into Norway April 9 to prevent a planned British invasion and of the issuance of the white book containing papers allegedly seized in Norway.

On the Norwegian warfront, the high command reported 11 British transports totalling 50,000 tons had been severely hit by German bombers off the Norwegian coast over the week-end.

Previous high command and DNB, official news agency, reports said three were sunk, four damaged, one set afire and three hit. The communiqque repeated a report that warplanes had bombed two British cruisers.

(A British statement denied German claims, said that only one trawler had been sunk and one set afire, and claimed three German supply ships had been torpedoed and sunk.)

Amid reports of new smashes at the Allies' attempts to strengthen their foothold in Norway, the leader of the Nazi labor front proclaimed solidarity of the Rome-Berlin axis for "victory" to come.

The labor leader, Robert Ley, who also is president of the states council and member of the reichstag, represented both France and Great Britain as common enemies of Germany and Italy.

In a 30-minute speech from a Cologne machine factory and to the cheers of his audience, Ley defined the Mediterranean area as Italian "living space" and then asked:

"What legal right have the French on Corsica? Napoleon, the great Corsican, was Italian. . . .

"What rights have the English on Malta and other islands in this sea?"

(Corsica, an insular segment of the Fench republic, lies off northern Italy, it has figured in times past in the Italian clamor for concessions from France.)

Ley said that Germany and Italy would stand firmly together until victory when "the English dragon-serpent will be vanquished."

German Supply Ships Sunk, Say British.

LONDON—(U.P.)—Asserting that three additional German supply ships had been torpedoed and sunk, the admiralty today issued a blanket denial of German claims of severe damage to British warships and supply ships in Scandinavia.

The admiralty admitted that the British trawler Hammond had been sunk by German airplane bombs and that the naval trailer Larwood had been set afire by an incendiary bomb.

Adding that there had been no casualties on either trawler, the admiralty said:

"There is not the slightest truth in the claim of the German high command to have sunk or severely damaged in the past 48 hours five cruisers and 13 transports. In fact the enemy's determined effort to render waters along the Norwegian coasts untenable have been attended with but slight results."

It was understood that the three transports whose sinking the admiralty claimed, had been torpedoed within the past 48 hours.

Belgrade Tightens Guard At Vital Buildings.

BELGRADE —(INS)— Hundreds of foreigners were arrested today and a strong guard was placed around all strategic buildings following an incident involving Yugoslavia's boy-king Peter, which led police to believe his life was in danger.

The youthful monarch was followed by three mysterious automobiles when he drove to his father's tomb at Oplanac, near Belgrade, on Sunday. As the king alighted near the tomb the mysterious cars stopped and several passengers came out. They were arrested immediately.

Police revealed the suspects were "all foreigners," but refused to give their names or nationality.

The arrests signaled a nationwide round-up of other suspicious persons During the past 36 hours authorities said "many hundreds" of foreign tourists were arrested and expelled. Most of them were "subjects of a belligerent state." they added.

BUCHAREST —(INS)— Without offering an official explanation, Bucharest authorities today reinforced military and police guards around all the capital's public buildings.

Heavily armed troops patrolled the streets and an especially strong guard was placed at the main post office and the Bucharest radio station.

Reports Progress In Trade Negotiations.

LONDON —(INS)— Considerable progress was reported today in resumption of trade relations between Great Britain and Italy.

Following an exploratory talk between Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax and Italian Ambassador Guiseppe Bastianini, held at the former's request, it was authoritatively stated that the two countries had reached "the initial stage in the direction of resumption of trade negotiations."

It was emphasized, however, that too much is not to be assumed from the progress thus far made.

The conversations were described as cordial, and embraced the contraband situation: Italy is known to oppose extension of the British blockade in the Mediterranean and the Adriatic.

CLAIMS PROOF OF NAZI PLOT

of having been the chief German spy charged with preparations for the invasion. Further, he asserted, Nolda had been German consul at Le Havre when the liner Paris was destroyed by a mysterious fire.

Hambro said that he personally had warned the Norwegian government to be most careful about permitting Nolda to serve as a German consular official in Norway.

Hambro, chairman of the Norwegian parliamentary foreign affairs committee, was sent here at the start of the invasion to act as his government's special representative.

"We now have irrefutable proof that Germany made detailed plans for invasion months before," Hambro said. "We would be in a better position today if the British really had had disembarkation parties prepared, and even more so if the allied intelligence service, which knew of the German preparations, had warned us in advance.

"We are not happy to admit that our legation in Berlin had news of the German disembarkation parties preparing to sail from German ports a week before the attack on Norway. We now have statements from members of our legation that they knew for some weeks that German troops were being embarked at various German ports, but that on information given to them they did not believe that the troops were intended for an attack on Norway.

"The Allies also knew of the preparations and if they had only informed us it would have been helpful in preparing for any eventuality, as we had taken no precautions whatsoever and were caught by surprise.

"The fact that the Allies never informed the Norwegian government at the time of Germany's intentions is evidence that they looked upon Norway as absolutely neutral and in no way prepared to be their ally."

U. S. to Investigate Nazi Use of Flag.

WASHINGTON —(INS)— Secretary of State Hull indicated today that the United States would investigate charges made in a statement yesterday by C. J. Hambro, president of the Norwegian parliament, that a German supply ship went into Narvik just before the Nazi invasion of Norway, flying the American flag.

Hambro said in his statement that he had a sworn report from a Norwegian pilot who escorted the German supply ship Jan Wellem into Narvik saying that the vessel not only flew the American flag but also had American insignia painted on its sides to disguise its true nationality. The false use of a flag is a violation of international law.

The secretary, who said he knew nothing of Hambro's statement about the incident until his attention was called to it by newspapermen, asserted that the state department would look into the matter promptly.

He added that he assumed that if the charge were true some report on the incident would be sent to Washington by American diplomatic or consular representatives in Norway. No such report, he said, had been received as yet.

Mansfield's Outstanding Cleaner

Mansfield News-Journal
AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER
MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, APRIL 29, 1940.

Minorities must sometimes wonder how majorities can be so mistaken.

Some of those Norwegian names sound odd—until you think of Oshkosh, Kankakee and Ypsilanti.

As nearly as can be judged from this distance, Jimmy Cromwell is more eloquent when he lets his money do the talking.

Community Chest Anniversary Year

MANSFIELD has made marvelous progress during the twenty years since the Community Chest idea was put in operation in this city as a means of providing funds for the maintenance of essential welfare, charitable and character building activities.

Before that time each of these activities had been carried on by means of separate campaigns for funds and it was decided that more effective work could be done, with economy in time and money, through a central organization and one annual campaign, as has been in vogue since 1920, when the last week in May was given to a successful Community Chest drive.

Changing times and needs have marked the record of Mansfield's Community Chest in the past two decades and 1940 finds general acceptance and widespread support of what was started as an experiment but which has proved its value year after year.

As in all civic enterprises, leadership and direction is an important element in a Community Chest campaign and in administration of the Community Fund. Mansfield has been fortunate in the earnestness with which many men and women have given voluntarily of time and effort in carrying through these campaigns, in addition to being liberal contributors of money.

And, too, the present generation of Mansfielders has had the advantage of additional education in giving, and in better realization of the worthwhile work being done by each of the agencies participating in the Community Fund.

Just as the life of each person is dependent on proper functioning of all of the intricate parts of the human body, so is each community dependent on the continuous and efficient handling of many phases of essential service.

And just as there is a human spirit, there is also a community spirit which clearly manifests itself to strangers as well as to those who are a part of it.

Your contribution to the Community Fund joins with the contributions of many others in making Mansfield a good city in which to live—a city in which thought is given to the needs of the less fortunate: to the advantages of character-building activities for its young people, and to the bodily nourishment of its children—a gift to the Community Fund is one act that you will never regret.

Recognition of Heroism

SUCH heroism as was displayed last Saturday evening by Orra E. Robison, Mansfield resident, must surely come within the scope of intent for award of a Carnegie medal, which is given in recognition of "an heroic act, even if the doer is uninjured," with a sum of money in addition "should the commission deem such gift desirable," with each case to be judged on its merits.

It cannot be doubted that it was at the risk of personal injuries, possibly death, that Mr. Robison rescued a woman and 13-year-old boy from a burning automobile following a collision between a car and a gasoline-filled truck north of Mansfield.

The helplessness of mother and child, and the speed with which flames destroyed both vehicles, must lead to the conclusion that the two would have died had it not been for the quick thinking and prompt action of Mr. Robison, who sustained severe burns of hands and arms in dragging the woman and boy out of the car.

The News-Journal offers the suggestion that facts in connection with this occurrence be assembled in proper form and submitted to the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission, 2307 Oliver Building, Pittsburgh.

When Suspicion Is Safeguard

SUCH occurrences as that in which a Mansfield woman was robbed of $150 a few days ago by two women who reportedly adopted the ruse of calling at the victim's home to conduct a religious service, have the unfortunate effect of placing all strangers under suspicion.

Pessimistic as such an attitude may seem, experience and observation strengthens belief that an unjustifiable risk is run when confidence is placed in an unknown person before investigation has been made or proper credentials submitted.

A hint along this line was displayed for a number of years above the desk of Elbert Hubbard's Roycroft Inn. It read: "Of course we believe everybody is honest—but we will not be responsible for valuables unless left in the office safe."

While Mansfield is quite generally regarded by newcomers as "a city of friendly people," once in awhile a stranger is heard to complain about coolness of reception and an apparent aloofness on the part of people he meets.

That complaint, however, has never been heard from a newcomer who was vouched for by friends and associates in the city from which he came, as being honest, dependable and fraternally acceptable.

Unhappy as such a situation may be, the conclusion must be reached that danger lies in trusting strangers who want to sell you something, ask you to subscribe to some "cause," or—it now appears—even come to your home to "pray with you."

In other words, KNOW THE PEOPLE WITH WHOM YOU DEAL AND WITH WHOM YOU ASSOCIATE.

Vital Inventions

LIKE the lists of "best books," a recently compiled list of "greatest American inventions" leaves many people unsatisfied. The seventy-five scientists and industrial executives who selected the nineteen "top" inventions chose them from a list of eighty important ones.

The final list omits various essential machine tools, the equipment which chiefly advanced the mining, treatment and handling of ore, the high-pressure steam engine, the automobile, and the devices for generation, transmission and distribution of electrical energy.

It might be an amusing and instructive game to try to figure out what our industrial development would have been, how fast it would have come, and so on, if any particular great invention had not been made.

The future belongs to the guessers.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Ely Culbertson is such a complex personality and such an extraordinary character that even people who know him intimately were astonished at some of the revelations in his autobiography, a story, incidentally, that would be almost too candid if it weren't so exciting. This is "The Strange Lives of One Man," recently issued, and it is all of that. I had seen him many times, talked to him at others, watched him play bridge, and in kicking around Broadway picked up what appeared to be a reasonable amount of personal information on this man who made a big business out of contract bridge. But it wasn't until Broadway read his book that I knew . . .

Ely, the card player, had plenty of mud on his boots before he became famous. He has worked in saloons, and hobnobbed with dope-fiends, and gambled in the Paris gutters with sharks who could wear gloves and stack a new deck . . . The first time he ever saw a game of bridge was on a ship, and he thought it was stupid . . . His mother was a Cossack's daughter, his father an American . . .

* * *

ANY reasonably close scrutiny of the records, if they haven't been destroyed, will show that Culbertson has done time in Russian and Mexican jails . . . Once he was condemned to death . . . Russia became unhealthy for him because he took part in movements involving popular unrest . . . Frequently he has won as much as $5,000 in a single evening . . . Just as frequently he has wondered where his next meal was coming from.

Knowing just how, and when, to send a little boy to do a man's work, has been important in his success at cards. But though his dreams are wild, and his plans sometimes fantastic, he is no adventuring romantic, once the cards are dealt. It is Ely's theory that ability can be measured like a piece of cloth. If you know your own value, and can appraise your opponents with any degree of accuracy, your chances of winning can be figured out with a lead pencil. He is coldly analytical, once a game begins.

His wife, Jo, seems to have been the most important thing in his life. He always, even at the apex of his success, insisted that she was his superior as a player. I remember once when she was staking all on his duel with Sidney Lentz, that he bowed to Mrs. Culbertson when she joined them at the game table and said, "To the greatest Contract Bridge player in the world."

* * *

AFTER this, Cultbertson and his wife went on to win the bridge battle of the century and with it a fame that brought in millions.

Today a lot of that money is gone, and so is Mrs. Culbertson—gone. The man who has lived by his wits on two continents, who has gambled in Budapest dives and lorded it over Park avenue palaces is carrying the torch for the only woman who ever meant anything in his life.

His story ends on the melancholy note of a sea voyage, with his wife en route to Reno and he himself heading out into the wide, blue Atlantic. As he stood in the night air on deck, trying to penetrate the fog, a night-watchman passed. "Foggy weather ahead, sir."

"Yes," said Culbertson, "foggy weather."

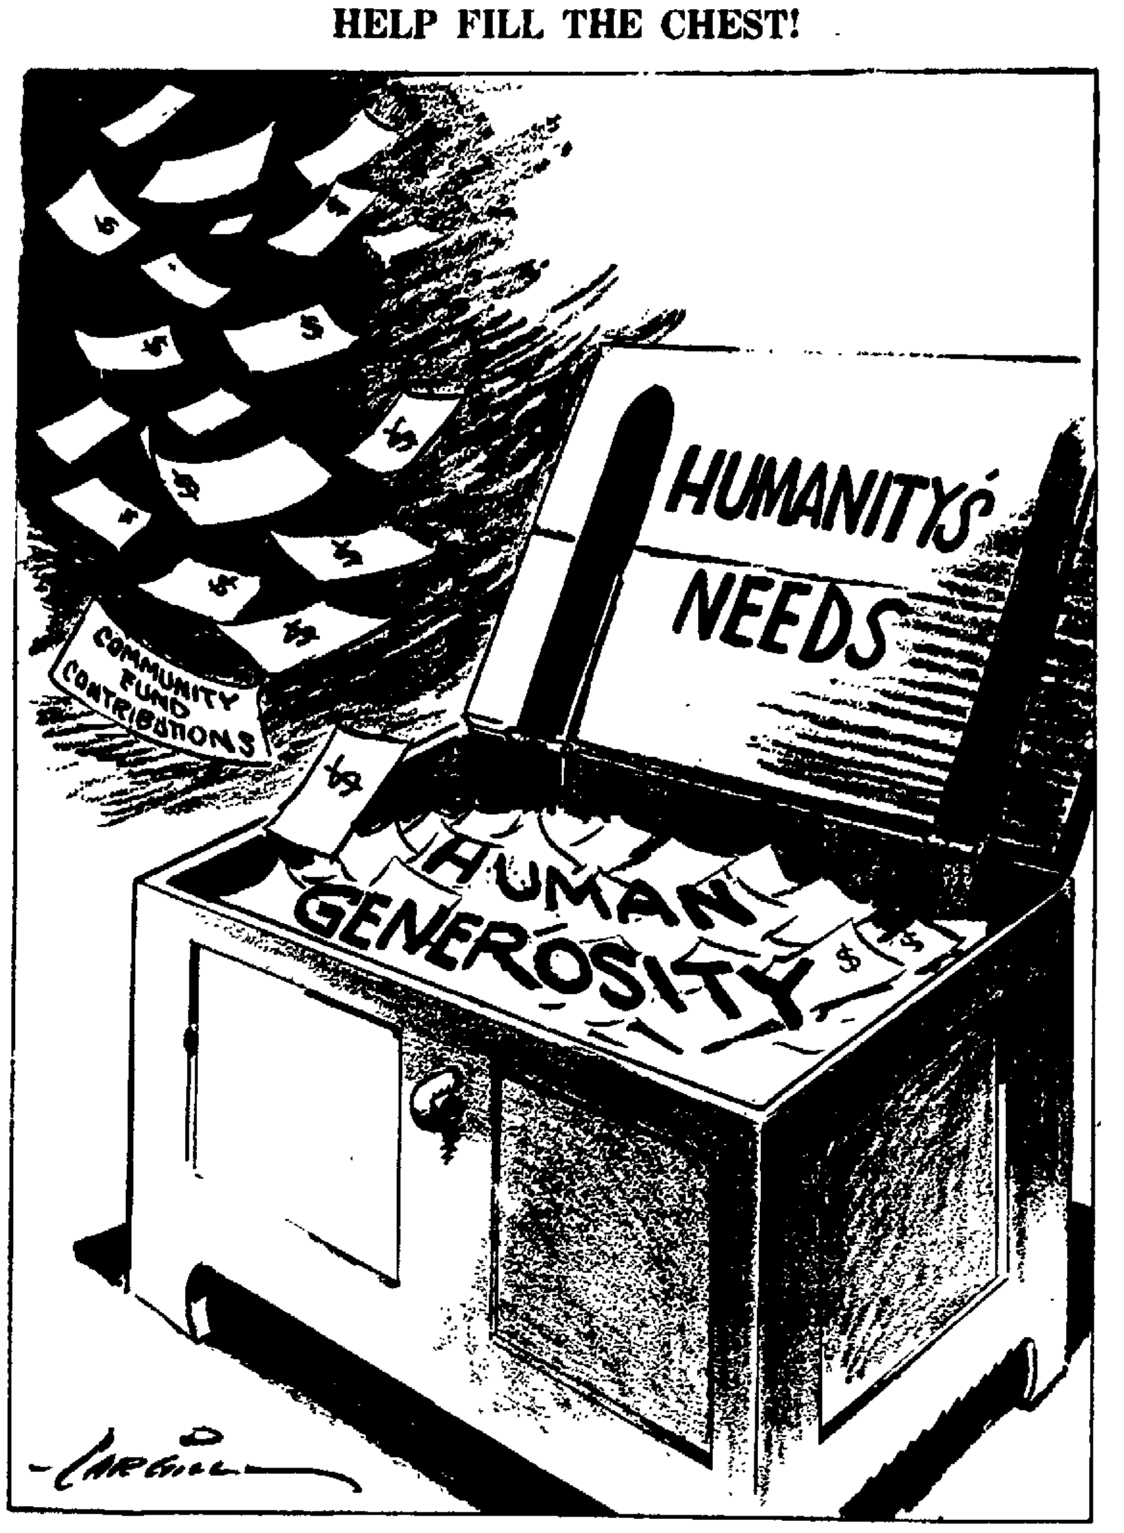
HELP FILL THE CHEST!



TVA Demonstration of Socialism

By GUS W. DYER,
Professor of Economics and Sociology, Vanderbilt University.

THE following interpretation of the TVA, it is believed, is supported by facts which, to the writer, are convincing.

As a ruse was skillfully manipulated to make an unconstitutional half billion dollar appropriation constitutional, another ruse is used to promote the fundamentals of state socialism or even communism under deceptive names and deceptive purposes.

The substance of the state socialism theory is that all business should be taken, controlled, and operated by the government. The American constitutional theory is that business is not a proper function of government, and that complex business can never be operated successfully under political direction.

The American theory is that the best general welfare and the greatest social and industrial progress come from the private ownership and operation of business under constitutional judicial regulation. Hence, the American theory and the socialistic theory are antagonistic to each other. No sort of fusion between the two theories is possible.

* * *

WHOEVER believes in, subscribes to, and is the advocate of the theory that general government ownership should be substituted for the American constitutional system of industrial freedom is hostile to the American constitutional system.

The Constitution, interpreted by constitutional judges—not puppets—is hostile to socialism and communism, the invincible defense against all attempts from without or within to overthrow the American system of industrial freedom. The achievement of the New Deal in circumventing, subverting and repudiating constitutional authority in putting the federal government in the electric power business by the ruse of indirection was a great victory for state socialism. It destroyed the "invincible authority" of the Constitution, and opened the road for socialism or communism by simple legislative action.

* * *

WITH constitutional authority destroyed, the next step was to give a big fake demonstration of the alleged superiority of government ownership over American free enterprise and industrial freedom. The TVA was selected as the demonstration to convince the easily led uninformed masses that they can get cheaper and more satisfactory service under government ownership than they can hope to get under the American constitutional system.

There were 4,000 municipal government owned electric plants established between 1882 and 1930. These did not impress the public. Since they could not hide the cost and charge it up to the taxpayers, 2,000 of these plants went out of business in competition with privately owned plants, and those remaining did only a fraction of the electric power business.

But the TVA was a new type of demonstration. Under the TVA the real cost could be hidden by charging over a hundred million dollars of the cost to the noble constitutional activity of stirring up sand in the Tennessee River, and solving the problem of occasional overflows by putting the land permanently under water. With the price kept down by this ruse, the people can be misled into thinking that the government can provide all services cheaper than they can be provided under the American system of enterprise.

The attitude of Congressmen, who under oath to uphold the Constitution, have appropriated a half billion dollars for a demonstration, the purpose of which is to overthrow the American constitutional system, is difficult to explain.

Timely Editorial

Ohio State Service Station.

It is understood that while a recent reference to Ohio State university by a national magazine as a "service station" irritated some of the alumni, President Howard L. Bevis seized upon the appellation as happily descriptive of the functions of the institution and remarked that he hoped the university always would be recognized as a service station by the citizens of Ohio.

Certainly there is nothing derogatory about the term, except that it knocks away the silk hats and haughty austerity and puts education on a practical shirt-sleeve basis.

Filling stations are recognized as vital to the welfare of modern civilization. They are the source of power, movement and the flow of commence. It is necessary for the fuel tank to be replenished from time to time, and the spark plugs cleaned, whether the reference is to mechanical or mental things.

In keeping with the service-station idea, it is noteworthy that Ohio State university is steadily increasing in importance as a center of activities in addition to furnishing educational facilities for its 13,000 students. —Ohio State Journal.

Hang a Lil' April On That Face!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

G'wan, pal, grin!
Shove that face around—
Shuffle those features—
Give the old front
A new deal.

Got troubles?
Sure you have.
Who hasn't?
But you don't need
To wear them outside.
Why be a billboard
For a grouch
Or a jolt of jitters?
Maybe you can't help
Having bad luck
But it's a cinch
You can help
Showing it.
Someone else
May be to blame
For the dent
In your bankroll
But you—and you alone—
Are responsible
For the sag
In your face
And the effect it has
On everyone's disposition.
There oughta be a law
For expressions like yours.
You're maintaining
A nuisance, buddy.
And I don't mean maybe.
For Pete's sake
Get busy
And do a job on it—
Quick!

G'wan pal, grin!
Curve those lips
'N' lift that chin!
It's just as easy
To wear a mouth
Turned up as down—
'N' a darned sight easier
On the audience.
What's more,
It's surely amazing
How shifting your features
Can change your set-up;
Let your jaw sag
And your beak droop
'N' you'll be feeling
Like a blighted buzzard
In nothing flat.
But yank up
The old wattles.
Pin a smile
On that profile
And you'll feel a song
Rippling through you,
Blasting its way
Through any bunch of blues!

G'wan pal, grin!
Take a chance
And hang a lil' April
On that face!
Times are tough enough
Without your adding
Your gob of gloom
To the blackout.
Worried . . . frightened—
Heartsick . . . sore?
Well, how about
The Other Fellow?
All the Other Fellows?
Do you think
They're feeling
Like Birthday Cakes?
Don't you s'pose
They're toting
A few gripes too?
Then com'on—
Get regular!
Loosen up!
Lighten up!
Tighten up that chin—
Give a smile.
They're needed—lots!
GRIN, PAL, GRIN!

Words of Wisdom

I would rather have a big burden and a strong back, than a weak back and a caddy to carry life's luggage.—Hubbard.

Hints on Etiquette

Listen to your own voice and intonations. It is not only pleasing, but it is good manners to speak pleasantly in a low, quiet voice, which can be acquired if you will but watch your tones and lower those high notes to make them clearly audible but pleasantly low pitched. A pleasant cordial voice will help you win friends.

One-Minute Test Answers

1. Yes, on warm nights.

2. It was originated by Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia. On May 8, 1914, President Wilson approved a joint resolution by congress that "the second Sunday in May shall hereafter be designated and known as Mother's Day."

3. Yes.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—There was a significant glint in the eyes of inner circle third termers when the news came over the wires that the president planned a transcontinental trip in June. The boys had the proverbial look of the cat that swallowed the canary.

They consider the tour one of their biggest breaks to dissolve any reluctance Roosevelt may have against running again.

Reason for this belief is the conviction that once he gets out into the country, away from the fierce partisanship of Washington, and scents the plaudits of the multitude, there will be a decisive psychological effect.

Lending color to this theory is an episode that occurred in 1938, when administration strategists were laboring strenuously to persuade Herbert Lehman to run for a fourth term as governor of New York in order to head off up-and-coming Tom Dewey.

Lehman wasn't eager to make the race and withheld his decision right up to the night of the nominating convention. When he entered the hall he was greeted with a tremendous demonstration, and Roosevelt who was following the tense situation over the radio, turned to the little group of intimates around him and said:

"You hear that! Everything is going to be all right now. Herbert will accept. No man who has been in public life can resist the lure of public acclamation. It always gets them."

Jackson or Hull.

THERE is no question that around Christmas time Roosevelt definitely discussed the idea of making Cordell Hull the Democratic nominee for president. More recently, however, he has been equally definite regarding the superior merits of Attorney General Bob Jackson.

This will surprise most political observers, especially conservative Democrats and those who saw the recent Roosevelt-Hull popularity chart prepared by the Gallup poll.

Nevertheless, Roosevelt is firmly convinced that Bob Jackson, if nominated, would be a better vote-getter than the secretary of state. And he bases this upon the following factors:

1. Jackson would get the Negro vote, whereas Hull wouldn't.

2. Jackson would have a bigger hold on labor, whereas Hull could not carry John L. Lewis and much of the CIO with him.

3. Jackson probably would be more popular with the farmers in view of the Hull trade treaties.

On the other hand, Jackson would not lose the conservative and Solid South, even though Southern party leaders were not enthusiastic about him.

In view of this Jackson talk, some of Roosevelt's close friends are beginning to think that the president plans to throw all of his now potent delegation support to his attorney general. But most of them are still betting that in the final showdown, FDR will run for a third term.

Note—Biggest IF in the above is whether Jackson could be nominated even with Roosevelt's support. There are many Democrats who doubt this.

"In the Spring a Young Man's Fancy."

MRS. BLAIR BANISTER, assistant treasurer of the United States, is bug-eyed with worry over the springlike fancy of her brother, Carter Glass.

The charming, cantankerous, much-loved senior senator from Virginia, having spent 82 tumultuous and distinguished years, now is seriously toying with the idea of matrimony.

She is Mrs. Mary Meade of Amherst, Virginia, an attractive widow of about 50. Mrs. Meade teaches school just north of the senator's home town of Lynchburg, and almost every week-end, the senator has taken time off either from his legislative duties in Washington or his editorial supervision in Lynchburg, to motor to Amherst.

Senator Glass has been a widower for some time, and appears to be so serious about a new matrimonial venture that it has caused much concern to his family. At the age of 82, the senator continues to be sprightly, energetic, and just as bellicose as ever. But his family is doing everything in its power to head off a second trip to the altar.

Mussolini vs. Ciano.

INTELLIGENCE reports out of Rome indicate a widening rift between Mussolini and his handsome young son-in-law and foreign minister, Count Ciano. The rift is over the Rome-Berlin Axis and whether Italy should enter the war.

Il Duce has a tremendous admiration for the German military machine, believes it will win the war, and figures Italy's fate is definitely tied up with the Nazis. He is absolutely convinced, and nothing can move him, not even his son-in-law or the King and Crown Prince of Italy.

Ciano, on the other hand, figures that in the long run the Allies will win the war. Also he cannot help but note that all around him the Italian people speak of Mussolini with affection but as the "old man," as if he were slipping. (He is the oldest of the dictators.)

As far as diplomatic observers can find out, Ciano wants Italy to make all the money it can during the war, take whatever financial baits are offered, and drive the sharpest possible bargain regarding new territory, but in the end side with France and England.

To get into war against the wishes of the Italian people (and there is no question that the people are emphatically against war), Ciano feels might eventually mean revolution and the end of the Fascist dictatorship.

Note—Some members of the Italian embassy in Washington make little effort to hide their pro-Ally feelings.

Hull's Visitors.

A TAXICAB pulled up at the diplomatic entrance of the state department, and a man stepped out, holding an empty liquor bottle in his hand. Instantly a traffic officer approached him.

The man leaned over and placed the liquor bottle on the curb, with elaborate care.

"What do you want here?" said the officer.

The man straightened himself with dignity. "I want to see the secretary of state," he said.

The officer reflected a moment. Then he said, "You step inside and speak to the guard."

Later, the officer and guard compared notes. The guard said, "I had just bounced him out. What did you send him back to me for?"

"Well," said the officer, "I don't work this beat regular, and I don't know everybody who might have business with the secretary. Some of these big shots get high, too."

Mare and Colt

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

THIS morning my neighbor turned his mare and colt out into the meadow. The sun shone on the meadow grass and changed its deep green covering to glittering silver. I could see the straight path the mother made half way across the field, and the uncertain wavering course the youngster took while following. The hoofs and fetlocks of the iron gray mare dripped as she moved along.

Her young black foal was wobbly yet, perhaps no more than two days old, but when his mother stopped and posed for him to feed, he understood. As he lowered his shoulders and turned his soft baby muzzle upward, she whinnered low and licked his rump until it glistened in the sun. Then by way of emphasis, she bit him playfully, just at the base of his black bushy tail.

The meal finished, he ran and skipped in small irregular circles, then returned to have his face and arched neck caressed by his mothers ample tongue. Perhaps his little sable nose itched, for without warning he rubbed it vigorously up and down the star in her forehead. Then he pranced away to a greater distance.

Presently, frightened by the fateful space between, the youngster raised his head and whinnered in a high pitched voice, until his pink mouth showed. His mother's nose was buried in the lush grass. With plopping lips and snapping teeth she was biting off the fragrant meadow growth. Now she turned toward the direction of the sound and moved concernedly to reach her offspring.

When they met, their moist soft noses touched and I could feel the import of the silent comfort that she spoke. Her large dark liquid eyes seems kind and responsible. Hers is a busy life, these days, to feed and groom and teach her careless wayward colt the arts of horsehood.

In a few more months he will graze, with her, upon the tender meadow grass. How high he will lift his head and how his rear heels will fly upward at the slightest sound, imaginary or real! What pleasure the warm June sunshine will be to him as he lies half buried in some fragrant hollow of the field! Let him enjoy his peaceful grassy childhood as he will—for days of heavy labor are not far off.

receive government flying instructions will be eligible for the contest to select the nation's three outstanding student pilots. Scholarships to be used for aeronautical education are for $1,000, $750 and $500.

The scholarships are from a fund established by the Shell Petroleum corporation. Awards will be made on the basis of the student's record in the government flight and ground courses, and his ability to execute specified flight maneuvers with precision and safety.

Rules which were forwarded to James R. "Bud" Harington, airport manager of Mansfield flight instructor for the government, say that stunt flying will have no place in the competition.

There will be seven regional eliminations contests about the middle of July, after which the seven winners will compete for the scholarship awards at Washington. D. C. Provision will be made for expenses for the finalists and semi-finalists.

Wednesday will be a big day in the lives of 10 young Mansfielders who have ambitions of becoming airplane pilots. Nine youths and a lone girl have been chosen from their top ranking examinations to participate in the Civil Aeronautics authority's flight training course here this summer.

They are part of the 45 students who spent the past three months in ground training classes and who last week submitted to tests conducted at senior high school by the federal government.

Wednesday night the Richland county chapter of the National Aeronautical association, sponsoring the civilian flying instruction program, will stage a banquet at Schwarz's tavern on route 42, south of Mansfield, to honor this group.

At the party, which will be attended by Earl Johnson, state director of aeronautics and Major E. H. Jose, of Chicago, the CAA's private flying specialist, grades of the exams will be announced and the 10 honor awards made.

Flight instructions are expected to begin about May 15 at municipal airport.

Consolation awards of certificates of ground school work will be handed to those who failed to rank among the first 10 but who had passing grades.

SINGER DEAD

Tetrazzini, Star of Opera's Golden Days, Stricken.

MILAN, Italy—(U.P.)—The world of opera mourned today for Louisa Tetrazzini, one of the most glamorour divas of the golden days. She died yesterday at 68 from a cerebral hemorrhage complicated by bronchitis.

Tetrazzini was a star from the time of her debut in Meyerbeer's "L'Africaine" in the early 1900's.

She went to the United States in 1908 and took the country by storm, not only with her voice but with an irrepressible sense of humor.

She was married twice and was devoted to her first husband, the late J. G. Bazelli. Her second husband was Pietro Vernati, from whom she was estranged.

SOCIETY & CLUBS

SINGERS CLUB TO BE ASSISTED BY BALLET

Louis Bromfield To Serve As Commentator For Spring Concert Scheduled May 6 At Senior High School.

NATIONAL Music week will be observed in Mansfield by patrons of the arts on May 6 when members of the Singers club augmented by a ballet of 18 from the Cleveland ballet present a concert at Mansfield Senior high school at 8:15 p. m. An added attraction of the program will be Louis Bromfield, former musical editor and critic of "Musical America," and famous author who will serve as commentator preceding the program. He will be introduced by Rev. David N. Roller, retiring president of the Civic Music association.

The program, an unusual one in this vicinity, will feature dances by the ballet, directed by Sergei Popeloff, Cleveland dancing master, and chorus numbers by the club. The dancers will interpret the music.

Of interest to opera lovers will be the "Dance of the Hours" from "La Gioconda." In this dance the times of day are interpreted by a ballet of dancers in pastel tinted costumes.

The ever popular "Blue Danube" will be another selection, and the ballet and the club will present a Dutch dance, a carnival number and the minuette in addition to an interpretation of "Tales from a Vienna Woods."

The Singers club is directed by Mrs. Walter T. Jameson and accompanied by Margaret B. Hall and Louise Reynolds. Marguerite Hoffacker accompanies the dancers, and Mrs. Rundquist is the costumer. Tickets are now available at Tawse's drug store or from members of the club, and patron seats will be exchanged for reserved tickets at Tawse's beginning Friday morning.

Stars Make Plans For Girls' Group; Select Adviser

When members of the advisory board met to discuss further organization of the Rainbow Assembly Saturday afternoon, C. M. Hunter was named chairman. This meeting was held at the Masonic temple, as the Assembley is being sponsored by Ruth chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, under the direction of Miss Pearl Wierman, worthy matron.

Miss Nellie McIlvaine was elected secretary of the board, and Mrs. Virgil Hartman, mother adviser. Mrs. Clara Colbow was appointed chairman of the housing committee, and Mrs. Martha Altaffer, financial chairman. Walter F. Greve of Cleveland, state organizer of these Rainbow groups, served as temporary chairman.

There will be another board meet on May 11 at the temple, and a pep session for girls will be held at that time too. On June 8, the institution of the Assembly will take place, with the Newark Rainbow Assembly in charge. The place will be announced later.

Form New Social Club In Shelby Saturday

A new social club—as yet nameless—was organized Saturday evening when a group of 12 Mansfield and Shelby friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Troxell, Shelby. The card game was in play at three tables with prizes being awarded to Al Evans, Mrs. Harold Ernsberger and Mrs. James Miller.

The hostess served a buffet luncheon to the guests from a table decorated with a centerpiece of jonquils. Arrangements were made to meet again May 25 with Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Bauer, 223 Saxton road.

Informally Speaking...

April 29, 1940.

Lucy, dear:

SUCH a beautiful day as we're having here—it looks as though the long-delayed and much-awaited spring has finally arrived, and really, it causes the whole world to take on a different appearance—a nicer one than it's had in a long, long time.

Marianne

You'll be pleased to know that you can see some of your old friends the next time you visit our town, Lucy. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Dale Yarnell returned Saturday from Sacramento, Cal.—where they'd made their home for the past three and a half years. . . . Their son, Edward, came back with them, as this is the family's former home.

* * * * *

Another one of our college students has done herself proud down at Miami university in Oxford. . . . Frances Hanson is one of four, who were initiated into active membership of Delta Phi Delta recently—this is an honorary art sorority. . . . Frances, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Hanson, is a member of the sophomore class at the school and serves as councilor to the freshmen girls residing in Oxford hall. . . . Incidentally, she was initiated into Alpha Omicron Pi (national social sorority) this year too.

* * * * *

Had you been here over the week-end, Lucy, you could have seen Martha Giffin. She came up from Lebanon for her birthday Saturday and then visited with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Giffin, until yesterday afternoon. . . .Martha's especially busy now with all those duties a teacher has as the school year draws to a close—you probably recall that she teaches art in the Lebanon public schools.

* * * * *

SPEAKING of the Alpha Omicron Pi sorority, as we were a moment ago, Mrs. Leland Samsel, who is president of the Mansfield alumnae chapter, attended the organization's state rally in Columbus Saturday and Sunday. . . . Marian Martin (assistant chairman of the national Republican committee in Washington, D. C.) was the principal speaker at a luncheon on Saturday.

* * * * *

We're going to be missing some folks around here from now on. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Don Davis have moved to Philadelphia, Pa. to make their new home. . . . Don's been there for about a month now, while Kay (you probably remember that she was Kay Frank before her marriage) left Saturday to join him. . . . Cincinnati has beckoned Mr. and Mrs. Ralph A. Mauer, and they've gone there to take up residence—the Mauers, you know, came here from Pittsburgh, Pa. about three years ago.

* * * * *

ARE you going up to Cleveland to hear Nelson Eddy's concert tonight? Some lucky girls from Mansfield are—Doris Simmons, Leah Kimes, Ruth Paessler, Helen Koozer and Mary Kelsey are all driving up this evening for the performance. . . . Oh yes, I mustn't forget to tell you that Mrs. J. M. Garber has just returned from New York City—where she visited for the past week with her son, Dr. C. Zent Garber, and his family.

* * * * *

Marie Hecht was in Fremont over the week-end attending the 11th annual state convention of the Daughters of Isabella there. . . . Marie, who is regent of the Joan of Arc circle here, was the official delegate of the local organization. . . . She drove up, accompanied by Nell Carrigan, Mrs. George Stuhldreher and Mrs. Clarence Beelman.

I'll be watching the mails for a letter from you, Lucy, so don't forget to write real soon.

Lovingly,

Marianne
